INTRODUCTION.

To the Class of Eighty-seven :

Classmates : —

It is again my pleasure to submit to you a report, this time of your personal histories during the last three years. It was my earnest desire to be able to report every man, but I regret to say that I am unable to do so; either through errors in my list of addresses, or from lack of interest on the part of the men, I have been able to learn nothing from a number of the Class. In some instances I have been able to supply the omissions from different sources; in others I have been entirely unsuccessful. I hope that any classmate who may be able to fill these blanks will kindly send me the necessary information, that I may have on my files a complete record of the Class, and also have something from which to start in the preparation of the next report.

Of the temporary members, a number who entered college with '86 and graduated with that class or always identified themselves with it, it seemed best to drop entirely, except from the list of the men who were connected with the Class; they seldom or never replied to requests for information about themselves, and I therefore gave up further attempts as an unprofitable annoyance to them and to myself. One other slight change has been made in the arrangement of the list of addresses and tables. As these are primarily for the use of the Class and are in most cases needed for ready reference, I have thought it best to print them alphabetically, distinguishing those who did not receive degrees by italics. The division is preserved in the lists at the beginning of the report and in its general arrangement.

It is my painful duty to call your attention to the loss of four of our number since graduation, of the Class proper, H. F. Coolidge, and of those who were temporarily members, A. C. Cochrane, W. D. Lynch, and S. M. Todd.

The review of the history of the University for the past three years has been written by Fletcher, and to him, as well as the other members of the Class who have so generously offered and given their assistance in collecting the necessary information, I desire to express my sincere thanks. It has been an exceedingly pleasant task to receive and file the many letters from you all, and again and again I have regretted my inability to answer. Let me say, as I have said before, that I am always glad to receive news from '87 men, and that it will very much increase the value of the records in my hands if you will from time to time notify me of any important occurrences in your lives. It is needless to say that any information as to Class matters that I may have in my possession, is always at the disposal of the Class, and will be very gladly furnished.

Notices will be published as heretofore, in the Boston Post, Advertiser, and Transcript, and the more important in the New York Times.

Very truly your classmate,

GEO. P. FURBER.

NOTE.—The first list includes those who received degrees, the second all others who at any time were members of the Class, the third those whose social relations have been especially with the Class.

RECORD OF THE CLASS.

July, 1887—July, 1890.

EDWARD STANLEY ABBOT.

Since graduation has been engaged in the stud medicine at the Harvard Medical School. In the fall of 1889 was elected a member of the Boylston Medical Society. Is not yet married "nor even engaged." Has taken part in politics "only to the extent of paying his poll tax, and voting at most of the national, state, and county elections at which I, as a citizen of Cambridge, was entitled to vote."

WALTER ALEXANDER.

Has been a member of the Harvard Law School since graduation, and a member of the Thayer Law Club. Made a number of political speeches in St. Charles county, Mo., in the summer of 1888. Has been a proctor in the University for the last three years.

JAMES EKIN ALLISON.

The Secretary has heard nothing from him directly, but learns from the '86 Class Report that he is in Nashville, Tenn., as a member of the firm of Overton & Allison, coal agents.

JOHN LINCOLN AMES.

Entered the Harvard Medical School in the fall of 1887, and has been studying there during the last three years. Is a member of the "Philedian," men's club, social; the Waltham Lawn Tennis Club; Masonic Fraternity, and the Boylston Medical Society. "Voted for Harrison and the straight Republican ticket since." Is also a member of an organization of '87 men of the Medical School who "get together once in two or three months for a reunion and social dinner at Young's."

RANDOLPH MORGAN APPLETON.

Is for all practical purposes a member of the Class of '84, and the reader is referred to the reports of that class for information about him.

WILLIAM CHANNING APPLETON, 2D.

"Owing to an illness just after graduating, followed by a weakness of the eyes, I did not enter business until March, 1888, when I became clerk for the firm of Thompson & Reed, insurance brokers, No. 66 State St., Boston. I continued in this place until July 31, 1889, when I was obliged to leave it on account of ill health, which the confinement of office work was increasing.

I spent August of 1889 on the coast of Maine, principally at Campobello and Mt. Desert; September and October at Cohasset. I moved to Dorchester in November and towards the last of the month entered my present employment, with the firm of W. L. Montgomery & Co., brokers in India tanned skins, gambier, etc., at No. 57 High St., Boston. I have not made any distant journeys. Besides the trip already mentioned, I went in August, 1887, to Mt. Desert for a few days. In March, 1889, I went to Norfolk, Va., by steamer from Boston, returning almost immediately. I am not married. I am a member of the New England Meteorological Society. All questions not answered above I answer in the negative."

WALTER AUSTIN.

Has been a student at the Harvard Law School. Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, Hawaiian Club, Young Men's Republican Club. "Summers of 1888 and 1889 travelled throughout most of the countries of Europe. Most enjoyable trip. People everywhere courteous, yet very often to be mistrusted. The gruff yet honest manner of Americans to be preferred to European varnish."

CHARLES FANNING AYER.

Spent two years at the Harvard Law School. Since then has been in Smartsville, Yuba Co., Cal., mining, ranching, and shooting. Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association, and the Vesper Boat Club, of Lowell. In 1888, spent the summer in a trip through Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, France, England, Wales. In 1889 made the trip to California, via British Columbia.

EDWARD BACON.

Taught for two years at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and during the last year has been at the Harvard Law School.

FREDERICK HAROLD BAILEY.

"Immediately after graduation, I entered the Graduate Department of the University, but remained there only three months as I accepted a position to teach mathematics in a boys' school which had just been opened in Worcester by Mr. Charles E. Fish, who is a Harvard graduate. In the fall of 1885, however, I returned to Cambridge and took up my mathematical studies again. In June, 1889, I received the degree of A. M. This last year also I have been studying mathematics and at the same time I have been teaching in the Mathematical Department of the University.

The only society I have joined since leaving college is the Graduate Club of Harvard University, the purpose of which is to bring together all the men at the University who are engaged in special study in the Graduate Department, and probably would not become acquainted with men not in their line of work."

GEORGE PIERCE BAKER, Jr.

Took a year of travel, spending three months ranching in New Mexico, October 1887 to January 1888, then March to October 1888, abroad. Has since been Instructor in English, at Harvard. Is a member of the Mermaid Club of Harvard University. Has written letters to the Providence Journal, from New Mexico and from Europe (winter of 1888); "Brother Filippo," a story, in the February and March numbers of the New England Magazine. In March of the present year delivered a lecture in Newcastle, N. H., on "Shakespeare's London." In the summer of 1889, made a trip to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

WAKEFIELD BAKER.

"1887–1888, Harvard Law School.

1888, July and August, Yellowstone Park in company with Mr. Geo. W. Sawin, since deceased.

Sept. 1st, 1888, started in business at the office and store of Baker & Hamilton, importers and dealers in hardware and farming implements, in this city (San Francisco) and have been working my way upward in this business since that time.

1889, June and July, devoted to an eastern tour, visiting all the large cities and devoting about three weeks to 'Harvard and its surroundings' at Commencement and Class Day.

Am a member of the Bohemian (social) and Olympic (athletic) Clubs of this city."

CHARLES SUMNER BALCOMBE.

From February to August, 1888, lived at Williamsburg, Ky., since that time at Knoxville, Tenn. Reports that he is unmarried and has done no literary work at all.

HENRY BLANCHARD BARBER.

Has been at the Harvard Law School.

NELSON MACY BARRETT.

"A few months after leaving college, I entered the employ of Edmands & Barrett, leather merchants, in Boston. After remaining there nearly a year, in March, 1889, I went to Alabama, where I have remained ever since. I have travelled considerably in the South and am now in the business of placing investments in that section, for northern parties, principally in improved real estate. My permanent address is Fort Payne, Ala., which I make my head-quarters. I am unmarried, nor have I a business partner."

CHARLES EDMUND BARROW.

Has been engaged in business in New York City, since March, 1889. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York.

JOHN MARSHALL WASHBURN BARTOL.

Has been studying at the Harvard Medical School. Is a member of the Boylston Medical Society.

HENRY WILLARD BEAN.

Has been a student at the Harvard Law School for the past three years, and a member of the Austin Law Club.

HARRY HASKELL BEMIS.

Entered the banking business in Boston, in August, 1887, in the office of Adams, Blodgett & Co., where he now is. Is a member of the Puritan Club, of Boston. "I have had no experiences of interest to the Class, and my life since graduation, has been the uneventful one in the ordinary pursuit of business."

BERNHARD BERENSON.

Has been studying and travelling in Europe since graduation. He has spent most of his time on the Continent, especially in Italy, where he has been making a careful study of the schools of painting.

HOWARD HENRY CHARLES BINGHAM.

For fourteen months, immediately after graduation, he was connected with the First National Bank of Junction City, Kansas. Here he had risen to the position of teller, when upon a visit to the East he determined to leave mercantile pursuits, and to turn his attention to teaching. He then began tutoring at his home in Hartford, and for the past year and a half has found his time wholly occupied in this way—proving more congenial to his tastes and in that locality reasonably remunerative. In July, 1889, he enlisted in the ancient organization of the Governor's Foot Guard of Connecticut, and of this he is an active member.

ELDON BISBEE.

The two winters succeeding graduation were passed in Jacksonville, Florida, where he studied law. Was admitted to the bar in Jacksonville in February, 1889, and practised law there with the firm of H. Bisbee & Son. Since October, 1889, has resided in Brooklyn, N. Y., and intends practising law in New York as soon as he is admitted to the bar of that State. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York, and was Secretary of the New England Society in Florida from February 22, 1889, until his resignation in August of that year.

WILLIAM HOLMES BLACK.

October 29, 1887, he entered the employ of Carnegie Bros. & Co. as assistant chemist at the Edgar Thompson Steel Works, in Pittsburg, Pa., and was later employed by Seaman, Sleath, & Black at the Phœnix Roll Works in the same city. Was married June 19, 1888, at Allegheny City, Pa., to Miss Ada Dravo of that city. In 1889 took a trip to California for his health, going via Santa Fe route and returning via Central Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, and Union Pacific R. R., with visits to all points in Southern California. The trip lasted from January to May. This year he again went to California via Cincinnati, Louisville, Mammoth Cave, Nashville, Montgomery, Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Galveston, San Antonio, El Paso, Tucson and Yuma, this trip, like the first, being for his health, which he reports as being rapidly restored.

JOHN BAPST BLAKE.

Has been taking the three years' course at the Harvard Medical School, and expects to begin practice in Boston, in July of this year. Is a member of the Boylston Medical Society.

EDWARD EVERETT BLODGETT.

"I spent the summer after graduation studying, and succeeded in entering the second year class of the Harvard Law School in the fall. During that year I was a member of the Ames-Gray Law Club, together with several other '87 men. At the beginning of the third year I was taken into the Choate Chapter of Phi Delta Phi—a legal fraternity. I graduated from the Law School in 1889, with the degree of LL.B., and went directly into the office of Gaston & Whitney, in Boston, where I remain at present."

HERBERT CLIFTON BOURNE.

September 20th, 1887, entered the iron and steel business with the firm of Condit, Fuller & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, and has been employed since as clerk and city salesman by this firm and the Condit-Fuller Co., where he now is. Was married June 4, 1889, to Miss Elizabeth Fero, daughter of Edward Benton and Frances Elizabeth Fero, of Cleveland. Is a member of the Harvard Club of Cleveland and of the Brenton Literary Exchange. In June, 1888, visited Boston, Cambridge and Cape Cod, and in June, 1889, took a similar trip by way of Buffalo, Albany, and New York City.

WILLIAM JACKSON BOWEN.

"The year after graduation was spent in the Harvard Law School. At the close of the term, I began work with the firm of Frederiksen & Co., dealers in Western lands, of Chicago, Ill., my business being to examine and report on mineral lands in Missouri, Virginia, and Alabama, where I spent a year full of pleasant experiences. Since I left the firm of Frederiksen & Co., I have been on my brother's ranch in Washington."

DWIGHT WHITNEY BOWLES.

Is reported to be on the staff of the New York Times.

WALTER LINCOLN BOYDEN.

Since leaving college has resided in Beverly and. up to January 1, 1890, had charge of his father's box factory.

HOMER WORTHINGTON BRAINARD.

Spent the year 1887–1888 as teacher of mathematics at St. Mark's School, Southboro, Mass. Since then has been a student at the Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn. In the summer of 1888 went to Washington, "having all the impressions appropriate to a patriotic American." Spent the summer of 1889 at Westport, N. Y.

HENRY GAW BRENGLE.

Since November, 1887, has been in the office of H. L. Gaw & Co., bankers and brokers, in Philadelphia.

RICHARD BRIGGS, Jr.

Went West in September, 1887, and entered the cashier's office of the Metropolitan Cable Co., in Kansas City, Mo., where he remained seven months. Then went into the German-American National Bank of the same city, where he rose to the position of exchange teller. After serving something more than a year in this capacity, he left Kansas City, last December, for Tacoma, Wash., and is now Secretary of the Tacoma Smelting and Refining Co.

ELLIOTT BRIGHT.

Has resided in Cambridge, and has been in the employ of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston since October, 1888.

CLARENCE ARTHUR BRODEUR.

"I have taught since my graduation, one year at Wellesley Grammar School, and two years in the High School at Franklin, Mass. Shall enter Boston University Law School next October, and shall take the course in two years; I expect to be admitted in 1892." Married, June 24, 1887, at Malden, Mass., to Miss Mary Cornelia Latta, daughter of John Gilchrist and Ellen Latta, of Newton, Mass. A son, Arthur Gilchrist Brodeur born Sept. 18, 1888, at Franklin, Mass. February 17, 1890, delivered the lecture on "The Adoption of the Constitution," in the Old South Course of lectures delivered at Franklin, Mass.

WILLIAM ALLEN BROOKS.

Since the fall of 1887 has been attending the Harvard Medical School.

GEORGE MORGAN BROWNE, Jr.

"The first year after leaving college I spent in travelling in Europe, and for the past two years have been studying law at Columbia College, New York. I have not been married, or published any book, or held any office of profit, honor, or trust."

GEORGE FAUNCE BUCK.

Has resided in Stockton and San Francisco, Cal., and for the last year has been a student at the Harvard Law School. Was admitted to practise law before the Supreme Court of California, August, 1889. Is a member of the San Francisco Harvard Club and the Pomeroy Chapter (San Francisco), and Choate Chapter, Φ Δ Φ.

HENRY AUGUSTUS BUCK.

In November, 1887, entered the employ of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company, at the Grand Central Depot, New York City, and is still with that company.

EDGAR BUCKINGHAM.

Spent one year as resident graduate at Cambridge and another as Assistant in physics at the same place. He is now studying in Strasburg, Germany.

JULIAN GERARD BUCKLEY.

Has been engaged in the study and practice of law with Platt & Bowers, of New York. Oct. 4, 1889, was admitted to the bar in Buffalo, N. Y. Is a member of the Union, Down Town, Lawyers', and Harvard Clubs, of New York.

WALTER CHANNING BURBANK.

Spent the three months after graduation in Europe. "In October, 1887, entered the Boston University Law School, and at the same time the office of Burbank & Bennett. Was admitted to the bar in Suffolk County, Mass., in July, 1889, and have since practised law with the above firm. Member of the Boston Art Club and of the Republican Ward and City Committee for Ward 10, Boston."

THEODORE PHILLIPS BURGESS.

Is the manager and superintendent of the Shawmut Fibre Company, at Shawmut, Me. Entered the business May 1, 1889, at Saugerties, N. Y. Has been hunting in Idaho, and has made three or four trips to Europe: once by way of Hudson's Bay and Straits, crossing the ocean as a common sailor before the mast. Is a member of the Union Boat Club, of Boston.

JAMES McCORMICK CAMERON.

Has resided in Harrisburg, Pa.

CHARLES CHURCHILL CARMALT.

Was studying at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York; the Secretary has been able to learn nothing further.

CHARLES CHOLLET.

Has neglected to leave any address with the Secretary, and nothing has been heard from him since graduation.

BERTRAM FISKE CLARK.

June, 1887, entered the Boston office of Everett O. Fiske & Co., teachers' agency, and is now manager of the Chicago office of the same firm.

HERBERT LINCOLN CLARK.

"Have been clerk in the banking house of F. W. Clark & Co., since Jan. 1, 1889; previous to that, private secretary to my father. Studied short-hand for three months previous to starting in with my father." Is a member of the University Club, of Philadelphia, and of the Junior Germantown Club, of Germantown. "Was taken seriously ill with typhoid fever in May, 1888, and went abroad afterwards for four months, to build up my strength. Had a very enjoyable trip, and did a good deal of travelling."

ARCHIBALD CAREY COOLIDGE.

"In the autumn of 1887 I sailed for Europe, and spent the winter term of that year at the University of Berlin; after a two-months' vacation in Italy, I returned to Germany, studied at Freiburg University during the summer term, and then travelled, largely by bicycle, in Switzerland, Austria, Italy, and the South of France. From the first of November, 1888, till the middle of June, 1889, I was in Paris, at the École des Sciences Politiques, after which I returned to America, spent a month at home, and finally came back to Paris by the longer route, seeing something on my way of Canada, Japan, China, Java, India, Ceylon, and Egypt. Since the beginning of February I have been studying at the École des Sciences Politiques."

FREDERIC SHURTLEFF COOLIDGE.

Since graduation has been a student at the Harvard Medical School. Is a member of the Puritan Club and the Union Boat Club. Spent the summer of 1887 in Europe, and went to California in the winter of 1888–89.

HERMAN TIMOTHY COOLIDGE.

Herman Timothy Coolidge was the third son of William L. and Sarah I. Coolidge, and was born in Natick, Dec. 5, 1864, so that at the time of his death he was within a few months of twenty-five years of age. From boyhood he showed himself to be earnest, ambitious, and capable; a thoroughly genuine and manly fellow, whom everybody liked and respected. He was educated in the Natick schools, graduating at the High School in 1881, and after completing the course there, spent two years at the Newton High School, where he fitted himself to enter Harvard College in the Class of 1887. His standing as a scholar, both at school and college, was very high. He was valedictorian of his class at the Natick High School, and delivered the Latin salutatory upon his graduation at Newton. In college he devoted himself largely to studies of a historical and economic nature, and graduated with especial credit in these branches. Although he was a conscientious and thorough student, he was greatly interested in all athletic sports. He was always one of the most active in local and school games. He was a member of his Freshman base-ball nine at college, and in his Sophomore year was a substitute player in the University nine, and at the time of his graduation he was a splendid example of physical and mental health.

He had selected journalism for his life-work. His studies in college were all turned in that direction, and he was unusually well fitted for a successful career in his chosen profession. Immediately after graduation he became a member of the staff of the Springfield Republican, and continued his work on that paper as a reporter, until, in December, 1887, signs of affection of the lungs (the result of cold and exposure) compelled him to abandon it. After a few weeks at home it was decided that he should go South, and he chose a new home among friends in Knoxville, Tenn. Here he entered almost immediately into the active life of the city. He joined the staff of the Knoxville Daily Tribune, became a member and officer of the Irving Club, the principal literary society of the place, and was earnest in the work of the church. He was becoming thoroughly identified with the local life, when it suddenly became evident to him that instead of gaining strength he was losing ground, and he was compelled again to look for a more favorable climate. In December he went to El Paso, Texas, and remained there until spring, when he went to Denver, Col., with the hope of making that his permanent residence; but the seeds of disease were fastened upon him. He failed rapidly, and in July he returned to his home in Natick, where he died Sept. 30, 1889.

The earnestness and conscientiousness which he evidenced in his early work he carried into his religious life. When eleven years old he joined the Congregational church, and he never relinquished his hold upon the Christian faith. He was active in church work in Natick. At Harvard he was a member of the College Christian Association, and in his Senior year was especially interested in it. In Springfield he was a regular attendant at the South Congregational Church, and taught a class in the Sunday school. In Knoxville, as has been said, he was even more earnest and active than before. He was a working member of the Young Men's Christian Association, and during the whole of his stay there helped to carry on a mission school in the outskirts of the city. In El Paso he helped to organize a Christian Endeavor Society, and was its first president. While there, he came to a decision to devote the remainder of his life to Christian work, and in Denver he began to fit himself for the ministry.

This is the story of a life that was altogether too brief. If it was full in promise, it was because, in its sphere, it had already been rich in accomplishment.

At a meeting of the class, held at Cambridge, Oct. 4, 1889, a committee was appointed, who prepared the following resolutions:—

It is with deep regret and sincere sorrow that we have learned of the death of our classmate, Herman Timothy Coolidge.

We recall with pleasure our associations with him in our college life. As a student he took high rank among us by diligent and careful work. At the same time, he entered actively into the sports and into the social and fraternal life of the college. But it was his personal qualities that won the affection of his immediate friends and the respect of all. His life was marked by the high purposes of honesty, and the purity of a Christian character. His loss is sorely and keenly felt by all.

In his death we feel that we have suffered a personal loss. We desire to express our deep sympathy for his family, upon whom this heavy blow has fallen.

LOUIS F. HYDE,
ALONZO K. WELLS,
WALTER S. FINKHAM.

DANIEL THOMAS COSTELLO.

"I received an appointment in the office of the Second Comptroller of the Treasury, Dec. 12, 1887, and have been here ever since. My occupation is examining claims made against the government. GORDON DEXTER.

"I have been living at home with my family, occupying the position of clerk in my father's office, since the autumn of 1887. I am not, it is almost useless to say, a professional man or a politician, nor am I married. My degrees, etc., are limited to a Harvard A. B., and my clubs, etc., are merely social. My travels are limited to a journey through the West and Pacific coast, with various trips during each year in and about New England."

ELLIS LORING DRESEL.

"October, 1887, to March, 1888, at the Harvard Law School; May, 1888, to September, 1889, in Europe; since October, 1889, in Boston, with no special occupation. Sailed for Europe, in April, 1888, principally on account of ill-health. Took the waters at Bad Gastein in the Tyrol for a month, then to Switzerland for the summer; in Dresden, from October, 1888, until February, 1889, then to a sanitorium in Wilhelmshohe, Germany, for four months. Visited the Paris Exposition and London in the early summer, and passed the rest of the summer in Switzerland (the Engadine), again sailing for home in September. This winter I have passed quietly in Boston, and hope soon to resume work of some kind. I know of no impressions that would interest the class; my life since leaving college has necessarily been a very quiet one."

Oglesby, who entered Harvard with the Class of '87, undertook a bicycle trip over Europe. We started on our journey, neither of us knowing how to ride, but learned in a day outside the walls of Paris. We arrived in Constantinople the 10th of October, having accomplished a distance of about three thousand miles entirely on our bicycles. Our route was as follows: Paris, Brussels, Amsterdam, Cologne, Frankfort, Leipzig, Berlin, Dresden, Prague, Vienna, Buda, Pesth, Belgrade, Nisch, Sofia, Philoppopel, Adrianople, and Constantinople. The number of actual riding days of the four months we spent in going from Paris to Constantinople was, if I remember correctly, forty-two, the rest being devoted to sight-seeing. We also rode from Athens to Megara, and from Naples to Rome, where we finished our trip on the 14th of November, 1889. Since then I have been travelling in Spain, France, and Italy."

Aug. 30, 1887, went abroad, and remained until December, when he returned to this country. January to July, 1889, was spent in a trip to California and the West, including a month on a Wyoming ranch. Dec. 19, 1889, became an editor of the Youth's Companion, Boston.

CHRISTIAN KESTNER.

Spent the two years following graduation in travel and study abroad, in company with Sternbergh. For the past year has been a member of the first-year class, Harvard Law School.

HENRY WILDER KEYES.

Has not replied, but the Secretary is informed that he has devoted a considerable portion of his time to farming. He has also been coach of the 'Varsity crew.

GEORGE WASHINGTON KIMBALL.

Has employed his time in travel in the West and Northwest and South. Is a member of the Home Market Club, of Boston.

GEORGE PERKINS KNAPP.

"My career since leaving college has been, briefly, as follows. The summer after graduation I worked in the National Bank of North America, Boston. That fall, Sept. 15, 1887, I entered the Hartford Theological Seminary, where I have taken the full three-years' course. The first summer after entering the seminary, I took charge of the Congregational church in Hiram, Me. Before my return in the fall, I had the chance to take a carriage drive among the White Mountains. Last summer I had a mission church in New Castle, a mining camp not far from Seattle, Washington. Here my work was chiefly among foreigners, most of whom were Welsh. I went West by way of the Union Pacific, through Kansas and Colorado, spent a week in Salt Lake City, and then went to Seattle via Portland and Tacoma, arriving the last week in May. Later in the summer I there met our classmate, Mr. Wiestling, who is better qualified to give impressions of the beauty and resources of the Puget Sound region than I, and to speak of the pluck of the citizens of Seattle, who were undaunted after the disastrous fire of June 6. I started East the second week in September, via the Northern Pacific, and spent two nights in St. Paul as the guest of our former classmate, Mr. Nutting. After visiting relatives near Chicago and in New York State, I returned to my work at the seminary. This last year I have improved quite a number of opportunities to supply Sundays in the pulpits of neighboring towns and villages. This year I have been the president of the Mission Band, which I joined on entering the seminary. For the last two years I have had charge of the physical training in the gymnasium. Our term here closes the 8th of May. I have been appointed a missionary of the American Board, and designated to Bitlis, Turkey, for which field I expect to start some time next summer."

JOHN HOLLY KNAPP.

Spent the first year at home in Menomonie, Wis., the second at Cambridge, studying law at the Harvard Law School, and the third year abroad. Was married May 22, 1888, at Warsaw, N. Y., to Miss Helen Lucelia Webster, daughter of James Aide and Martha McWethy Webster, of Warsaw. Sailed from New York for Liverpool, Oct. 26, 1889, and remained abroad seven months, visiting Scotland, England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and France. "All interesting, from a historical and artistic point of view, but for solid comfort, stay in America." Sailed from Liverpool for New York, May 7, 1890.

AUGUSTUS SMITH KNIGHT.

Has been studying at the Harvard Medical School; has been appointed house officer at the Boston City Hospital. Spent the summer of 1887 in Europe.

JOHN WEBSTER KNOWLES.

Has not made any reply.

HAMILTON KUHN.

Has been in Cambridge, attending the Harvard Law School, for the last three years.

GEORGE EDGAR LADD.

Spent the years 1887–88 and 1888–89 at Harvard, studying for a Ph. D., but did not finish the last year. Since leaving Cambridge has been employed on the State Geological Surveys of the States of Texas and Missouri, as assistant geologist. May 14, 1889, at Bradford, Mass., he was married to Miss Mary Oceana Hammond, daughter of Augustus and Sarah (Kimball) Hammond, of that city. Received the degree of A. M. from Harvard in 1888. Is a member of the American Geological Society, American Association for the Advancement of Science, and the St. Louis Academy of Science. Has published "Notes on the Building Stones, Clays, and Sands of Iron, Madison, and St. Francois Counties, Mo.," April, 1890.

WILLIAM WALTON LINN.

Has been studying at the Harvard Law School for the last three years.

EVERETT STARR LITCHFIELD.

Since graduation has resided at Wollaston, Mass. Has been in the office of the Massachusetts Benefit Association since July, 1887, and was made assistant treasurer in June, 1888. Aug. 1, 1889, was married to Miss Ruth Rippey, daughter of Charles H. and Virginia Rippey, of San Diego, Cal. Was made treasurer of the Orange County Stock and Dairy Co., of Florida, in February, 1888, and in August, 1888, was chosen secretary of the New England Live Stock Insurance Co., of which he was also treasurer from August, 1888, to October, 1889. He still retains the secretaryship, and since June, 1888, has been secretary and treasurer also of the Thayer Academy Alumni Association. Is a member of the Eliot Club, of Wollaston. Has made two trips to the Pacific slope, in April, 1888, and in June, 1889, and had a very favorable voyage to Nova Scotia, August, 1888, during which he visited Grand Pré.

HENRY JARVIS LIVERMORE.

"During the summer of 1887 I remained at my home in Cambridge. In the early fall, just at the opening of the college term, I left for St. Paul, Minn., to take a position in the office of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad. I remained there six months, and then (in April, 1888) returned to Boston. I was not very favorably impressed with the West; nor do I think one born and bred in any of the older Eastern cities is likely to be. This is said with all due respect to the Western cities, and the opinion is born of a partiality to my native heath, which I deem pardonable. I look back with pleasure to the dinner of the Harvard Club of Minnesota, which was given at the Minnesota Club during my stay in St. Paul. It is needless to say that the speeches were as sparkling as the champagne, and the occasion, like all college reunions, one long to be remembered by all present.

"Shortly after my return to Boston (July 5) I was married to Miss Susie T. McKay, of Cambridge. During the summer of 1888 I lived in Boston, and in the fall moved to Jamaica Plain, where a girl, Clara Allina Livermore, was born to me. In August, 1889, I moved to Hyde Park, where I am now living.

"During all this time I have been a rolling stone, and have proven to my entire dissatisfaction the truth of the proverb; but, although the last vestige of moss has disappeared, I have some slight hope that the seeds are sown for a larger and a better growth. For a while I tried to make of myself a patent solicitor, and served an apprenticeship in my brother's office, 40 Water Street, Boston. After a while, however, I came to the conclusion that I was serving neither my brother nor myself, and cast about for something else. As a means to an end, I took up stenography, which I find to be a very valuable accomplishment. In my attempt to find a suitable opening, I have already served three different firms: Messrs. J. B. Williams & Son, of Dover, N. H., manufacturers of leather belting; Messrs. George Draper & Sons, of Hopedale, Mass., manufacturers of cotton machinery; and The Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, of London, Eng., represented in the United States by Messrs. Endicott & Macomber, at 71 Kilby Street, Boston. I am now in the office of the firm last mentioned, and if affairs go as I have reason to hope, I shall remain there."

MYRON AUGUSTUS LOCHMAN.

"If to be happy is to live an uneventful life, I am certainly most fortunate. I have written a little, travelled a little, taught a little, in the three years since we graduated. I have received that degree which sounds so large and means so little, the Mastership of Arts (Harvard, 1888). The clubs to which I belong are not famous, or ever destined to be so. For the rest, I am as other men are."

HOWARD AUGUSTUS LOTHROP.

Has been at the Harvard Medical School. Is a member of the Boylston Medical Society, and its secretary and treasurer for the year 1889–90.

CHARLES ELIOT LOUD.

After leaving college, he entered the Harvard Law School, where he remained about half a year. Of his movements since then he writes from Venice, May 10: "April 25, 1888, I sailed to Antwerp from New York and went thence up the Rhine to Freiburg, where I spent two months and a half at the university with my college chum, A. C. Coolidge. We had the good fortune while there to be taken into the family of Prof. Von Holst, who, with his charming American wife, showed us every kindness and provided us with what Americans so much appreciate, but so rarely find in Europe, — a home. After a visit to Bayreuth, about Aug. 1, and on our return to Freiburg, we began a bicycle tour through Switzerland. The machine which we purchased in Germany, and used during our stay in the Black Forest, was to us, and to almost every one we met, a novelty — a tandem bicycle. We made the tour of Switzerland's chief sights in this way, though bad weather often prevented riding. Then after a week in the Engadine, and another in Vienna and the Tyrol, we rode from Cortina nearly to Venice, making eighty-seven miles, by far our best record for one day. Later we spent three weeks at the Italian lakes, and thence began a bicycle tour along the Riviera, and up the Rhone Valley to Lyons. Since arrival at Paris, soon after, the bicycle has been idle. From Nov. 1 to Feb. 15, 1889, we were at Paris, at the École des Sciences Politiques. Then I travelled alone until May, spending three weeks in Florence, one week in Corsica, three weeks in Spain, two weeks in Algeria and Tunis, and thence to England. There I spent the whole summer with my family, and in October returned to the Continent for a few weeks in Belgium and Holland, a trip up the Rhine to Frankfurt, Heidelberg, etc., and one and a half months' stay in Berlin and Dresden. About the beginning of the present year we went south to Italy, and have since, with the exception of three weeks, remained here, spending five weeks in Rome, ten days in Sicily, three weeks near Naples, and shorter times at various places. During the stay of my party in Florence, I took a second trip to Algeria and Tunis, for three weeks, with my brother. After a summer in Switzerland, I shall return home to Boston, Oct. 9, after two years and a half of European travel."

LINN LUCE.

Since April 1, 1888, has been in the publishing and newspaper clipping business of the firm of Robert & Linn Luce.

EDWARD IRVING MANLEY

Sept. 11, 1887, began teaching at Illinois Wesleyan University, where he remained one year. Since that time he has been teaching at the Illinois State Normal University. Is a member of the Philosophical Club, of Bloomington, of the Harvard Club of Chicago, and the Faculty Club, of the State Normal School, at Normal, Ill. Has written numerous contributions to the local student press, delivered an address on "Opportunities for Higher Education in the East," and read several papers on athletics. Visited Boston in the summer of 1888, and again in the holiday season of 1889. "Since leaving college, my life has been an uneventful one. The every-day routine of the school-room life has nothing either romantic or exciting about it. I have kept up my athletics as well as I could in a place where such things are not encouraged. In Western schools young men care much more for their Greek-letter societies, their literary societies, oratory, and girls, than for athletics. Consequently my efforts in this line have met with no co-operation, but also at times with much opposition. Students in Eastern colleges do not know what the word 'chump' means.

"The older I grow, the more I am impressed with the great advantages of Harvard. If one does not go to Harvard too young (as I did) he cannot help seeing the great number of opportunities offered him to make a man of himself."

FREDERICK HUBBELL MARVIN.

His first year after graduation was spent in travel in Southern California. In September, 1888, he went to Paris, where he is now studying art.

FRED SUMNER MEAD.

For the first fifteen months after graduation was abroad, travelling; since then has resided in Boston, and has been engaged in the banking business, with Irving A. Evans & Co., Boston.

EDWIN JOSEPH MEEKS.

Since leaving college has resided in New York, where he studied medicine until March 10, 1890, when he received the degree of M. D. from Bellevue Hospital Medical College; is a member of the Harvard Club of New York; $\Phi A \Sigma$, a medical fraternity; the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and the Society of War Veterans of the Seventh Regiment. "Have travelled pretty much over the United States since leaving college."

FRANCIS MICHAEL.

Studied at the Harvard Law School for about a year and a half, and then returned to San Francisco, where he continued his law studies. Was admitted to the bar at Sacramento, Cal., in May, 1889. Is a member of the Bohemian Club, of San Francisco.

MORTON DAVIS MITCHELL.

For three months after leaving college was one of the editorial staff of the Boston Advertiser, and since then has been connected with the Boston Herald. Is now Washington correspondent for the latter paper. Is a member of the Boston Press Club, the Boston Architectural Club, the Nationalist Club, the Metropolitan Club, of Washington, and the Columbia Athletic Club, of that city. "Only interesting trips were: a trip to the new coal and iron regions of the South, Alabama and Tennessee, in 1889, and the forty-two days' trip of nearly five thousand miles throughout the Middle, Eastern, and Western States, with the members of the Pan-American Congress in the autumn of 1889."

GEORGE AUSTIN MORRISON.

Has been studying law in New York. Has received the degrees of A. M. and LL. B. from Columbia.

JOHN LOVETT MORSE.

"Entered the Harvard Medical School in the fall of 1887, and have been studying there ever since. Have n't had time to do anything else."

GEORGE SALTONSTALL MUMFORD.

Began business life, July 10, 1887, with the "C. & C." Electric Motor Company, of New York, of which he is general manager and treasurer.

FRANK NELSON NAY.

Has been studying law at the Boston University Law School. Was admitted to the bar of Suffolk County, Mass., in January, 1890, and is now practising with Chas. G. Fall. "Have been working pretty steadily, with only a short trip now and then. Have a very good chance to study the practical side of the law, and though not getting rich, am doing fairly well."

FRANK WALTER NICOLSON.

Returned to college in 1887–88, taking the degree of A. M. in June. Returned the following year as Instructor in Sanscrit, during Prof. Lanman's absence in Europe. Was appointed Instructor in Latin for the current year, 1889–90. Is president of the Harvard Classical Club, and also president of the Harvard Canadian Club since its founding, 1889. Is a member of the Oriental Society and of the American Philological Society. Contributed a short paper at the meeting of the latter society, in July, 1889, on "The Interpretation of Arist. Ach. 849." Is also assisting in the preparation of the quinquennial catalogue of the University.

WALTER OAKES.

October, 1887, began business in the railroad office of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis Railroad, at Springfield, Mo., where he remained a year and a half; then spent six months in the office at Kansas City. Since December, 1889, has been secretary and treasurer of the Puget Sound and Alaska Steamship Company, at Tacoma, Wash. Has crossed the continent three times since graduating.

OTIS BRIGGS OAKMAN.

"My first year after graduation was spent as special instructor in physics at the Cambridge English High School. Last year I was at home with a private pupil, with whom I travelled last summer. At present I am instructor in French and Latin in Thayer Academy, Braintree, Mass., where I fitted for college." Is a member of Mt. Olivet Lodge, A. F. A. M., which he joined in May, 1888, and of Cambridge Royal Arch Chapter, of which he became a member in June, 1889. Has been delegate to the convention for the nomination of governor and other State officers. "During the summer of 1889 made a trip through Canada, down the St. Lawrence to Niagara, going as far west as Chicago and south to Washington, D. C."

ARTHUR HENRY OSGOOD.

Took the course at the Harvard Dental School, from which he received the degree of D. M. D. in June, 1889. Has since been with H. D. Osgood & Son, 25 Tremont Street, Boston. Was married June 27, 1888, to Miss Jennie L. Merrill, of Roxbury, Mass. Has a son, Herman Ashton Osgood, born March 11, 1890.

ROBERT TREADWELL OSGOOD.

"In September went to Pittsfield, Mass., and taught classics as sub-master of the High School. The following autumn came here to Andover, Mass., and have since — a year and a half — pursued the regular theological course at the seminary, where I expect to graduate in June, 1891. During the vacation weeks of summer I have occupied myself with lighter mental work, and have cruised over New England coast waters mostly, with the many pleasures and pains attendant upon yachting, and so well known to all yachtsmen."

EDWARD CHRISTOPHER PALMER, JR.

"My story, like that of nearly every other fellow who must depend upon himself, and enters the mercantile lists handicapped by competition with trained business men, is perforce very tame. In such lives there are almost always a few years of slaving before any light appears ahead, and with me this probation, or, more correctly, purgatorial period is not yet passed. In September, 1887, I wrote several railroads, applying for a position, and almost immediately found one with the general passenger agent of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R., in whose office I remained until February, 1889, when, at my request, I was transferred to the general freight office of the same road, and am still employed there. I cannot say that I have achieved any great success in my line, but I know of no other that offers greater opportunities to a fellow situated as I am.

"For nearly two years, and until very recently, I have been chumming with A. T. Perkins, '87, who is also connected with our road. Being in Chicago (become, since the passage of the world's fair bill, the 'hub of the universe'), I am in a good position to meet fellows here, and I wish you would say for me that I am generally in Room 12 of our building, corner of Adams and Franklin Streets, and I shall be pleased to see any of our fellows who will drop in. The old, familiar faces will always be welcome."

FRANCIS STERNE PALMER.

In 1887–88 was a student at the Harvard Law School; 1888–90 has been a student in a law office and in practice at Plattsburg, N. Y., with the firm of Palmer, Weed & Kellogg. Was admitted to the bar of the State of New York, Sept. 13, 1889. Is president of the Young Men's Protectionist Club, and deputy clerk of Clinton County, N. Y. Has contributed both prose and verse to Life, Puck, "New England Magazine," "Brooklyn Magazine," Youth's Companion, Golden Days, etc. Reports addresses before political meetings and county conventions.

FRANK CLAFLIN PARMENTER.

Has been in business at Gloucester, Mass., with the firm of Parmenter & Co. Was married June 12, 1889, to Sarah Alice Pew, daughter of John James and Lucy Choate (Poole) Pew, of Gloucester. Is a member of the Republican City Committee, and has been inspector at the polls.

CHARLES SHARPLESS PASTORIUS.

Went to Europe in June, 1887. Was in and about London at the time of the Queen's Jubilee. Travelled on the Continent during the summer of 1887, principally in Switzerland and at Paris. Spent the following fall at Heidelberg and the winter in Italy. Returned to Philadelphia in the spring of 1888, where he entered the employ of Hubbard Brothers, book publishers. In 1889 removed to Colorado Springs, Col., where he engaged in the real-estate business with Francis D. Pastorius. Is now studying architecture.

HARRY ERNEST PEABODY.

The first year after leaving college was general secretary of the Hennepin County Sunday School Association, at Minneapolis, Minn., and since then has been studying at the Yale Divinity School.

LINCOLN REA PEABODY.

"Since I left college I have lived in Salem. On Sept. 20, 1887, I went into the employ of Henry W. Peabody & Co., who are engaged in the shipping and export and import business, principally with Australia.

"Outside of business my life has been uneventful. I have not gone into politics, nor have I held any office of profit, honor, or trust. The only clubs to which I belong are the Beverly Yacht Club and the Corinthian Yacht Club.

"I have done no travelling during the last three years beyond two short trips taken in my summer vacations. In August, 1888, I visited the St. Lawrence, particularly in the region of the Thousand Islands, and Lakes George and Champlain. In August, 1889, I went to the White Mountains.

"I suppose that it is unnecessary to add that I am not married."

JOSEPH HALL PEARL.

Began to read law in September, 1887, at Haverhill, Mass., in the office of Abbot & Pearl, and this year has been studying at the Harvard Law School. Has been a member of the Republican Town Committee for three years, and a delegate to numerous conventions. "In general, have worked hard for the success of my party." Feb. 1, 1890, was appointed special agent, eleventh census.

ALBERT THOMPSON PERKINS.

"In October, 1887, I entered the general freight office of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, at Chicago, and I have been in the service of the 'Burlington Route' ever since that time. In September, 1888, I was made chief clerk in the contracting freight office at Chicago. In November, 1889, I was made travelling freight agent for Indiana and Ohio, with headquarters at Chicago, and in February, 1890, I was made chief clerk of the general freight office of the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern and Chicago, Burlington & Kansas City Railroads, at St. Louis."

HENRY GROVER PERKINS.

Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association and the Quiz Club, of Dorchester.

SAMUEL WELSH PERKINS.

Since leaving college has been in New York, where he was married Nov. 11, 1889, to Miss Louise Edey, daughter of Henry and Louise R. Edey, of that city. Reports, "Going to Tacoma, Wash., about Feb. 15, to live."

WALTER SAMUEL PINKHAM.

Entered the Harvard Law School at the beginning of the school year, 1887–88, and has been a member of the school continuously since then. Was a member of the Ames-Gray Supreme Court, and is also a member of the Young Men's Republican Club, of Quincy.

ALFRED ARTHUR POEY.

Studied law at Columbia College Law School, and is now in the office of Bristow, Peet & Opdyke, 20 Nassau Street, New York.

WILLIAM SEARS POPPLETON.

"I have lived in Omaha since graduation, and have been engaged in the study of law. Was admitted to the bar on or about the 1st of May, 1889. The style of the firm of which I am a member is A. J. & W. S. Poppleton, Room 314, First National Bank Building. Have taken no trips abroad, written no books, received no college or other degrees."

ALBERT BAILEY POTTER.

"At first travelled, then went into an office and did not like it, and became a 'cow puncher' in Dakota. Did this some months, and then travelled again for some time; then entered the office again. I then took a short trip, and entered the office where I am now, with A. B. Turner & Bro., brokers, 89 State Street, Boston. The office where I first started was the office of Potter, White & Bayley, Boston." Member of the Boston Athletic Club and Country Club. Travelled in Europe in 1885, 1887, and 1889; went through the West and Northwest to the Pacific coast in 1888.

MILFORD SEWARD POWER.

Has been teaching in the Chauncy Hall School, Boston, since September, 1887.

WHITMORE PRESTON.

FRANK INGERSOLL PROCTOR.

Has been studying at the Harvard Medical School.

GEORGE JACOB PUTNAM.

Since November, 1887, has been with Geo. F. Putnam, manufacturer and wholesale dealer in leather, Boston and Salem. Is a member of the Algonquin Club, Boston Athletic Association, and Twenty Associates. "In March, 1888, took a trip to Florida, after being stalled in the snow just outside Jersey City, in the train, for two days. Spent three weeks in Florida, most of the time on the Indian River, fishing. Have spent three weeks each summer in the Dead River region in Maine, fishing and shooting, and the balance of the summer at Beach Bluff, Mass."

GEORGE TOTTEN QUINBY.

Studied at Cambridge the first year after graduating in the Graduate Department. Spent the second year as a non-resident student of the Graduate Department, in work for the United States Geological Survey. EDGAR JUDSON RICH.

Spent his first year after leaving college in teaching the young idea, etc., at the B. M. C. Durfee High School, Fall River, Mass., where he was instructor in English and civil government. Browning and foot-ball were his principal means of recreation, while other ways of passing a pleasant moment were not wanting. The last two years he has been a student at the Harvard Law School, and a member of the Pow Wow, the Choate Chapter, $\Phi \Delta \Phi$, and an editor of the Harvard Law Review. His maiden political speech was made at the meeting of the Harvard Republican Club, in Tremont Temple, Nov. 2, 1888. His printed efforts are few: various notes in the Law Review, a pamphlet descriptive of the B. M. C. Durfee High School, and a high-school prophecy, for private circulation, comprising the whole. He has spent his summers in the hotel business, two years as manager of the Glen House stage lines, and one year as manager of the Hotel Preston, Beach Bluff, Mass.

ROYAL ROBBINS.

B. from the Columbia College Law School. Nov. 11, 1889, was admitted to the bar of New York State, First Department, and is now in the office of P. & D. Mitchell, 137 Broadway, New York. Is a member of the Republican organization of the Twenty-first Assembly District, and occasionally attends primaries; has voted the straight Republican ticket. "Immediately after graduation took a trip to England, Wales, and France, — more particularly Royal-les-Bains, St. Honoré-les-Bains, Bourges, Tours, Le Mans, Angers, the castles of Chambord, Chenonceaux, Chaumont, Azay-le-Rideau, Chinon, Blois, and Angers, many of them furnished with the furniture of the Renaissance, just as Catherine de Medici, Diane de Poictiers, and Francis I. had lived in them and left them."

BENJAMIN LINCOLN ROBINSON.

"On leaving Harvard I made a brief visit to my home in Illinois, and then went abroad with Mrs. Robinson to continue my studies there, especially in botany. Going straight to Strasburg, I remained there about two years, studying at that university from October, 1887, to November, 1889. From December, 1889, to February, 1890, I attended the University of Bonn. Then after some weeks of travel I have returned to Cambridge, to take the position of Assistant in the Harvard University Herbarium. On June 29, 1887, I was married to Margaret Louise Casson, of Hennepin, Ill. Our little daughter, Chriemhild Robinson, was born at Strasburg, on the 29th of May, 1888. July 19, 1889, I received the degree of Ph. D. from Strasburg University. Since leaving Harvard I have written the following scientific papers:

'Notes on the Genus Taphrina,' published in the Annals of Botany, November, 1887, at Oxford, Eng.; 'Beiträge zur Kentniss der Stammanatomie von Phytocrene macrophylla,' in the Botanische Zeitung, October, 1889, Leipzig; 'On the Stem-structure of Ipoles tomentella and certain other Phytocreneæ,' published at Leyden, Holland, in the Annales du Jardin de Buitenzorg, April, 1890. Although confined during term-time by my studies, I managed during vacation to do considerable travelling in Central Europe, visiting the most prominent points of interest in Germany, Switzerland, Tyrol, Austria, Bohemia, Holland, and Belgium, as well as the cities of Paris and London."

JAMES HARVEY ROBINSON.

"I spent one year as a post-graduate at Harvard. Since August, 1888, I have been in Europe, studying at the universities of Strasburg and Freiburg. I have given special attention to modern history." Sept. 1, 1887, was married to Miss Grace Woodville Read, daughter of Charles Edward and Sarah Granger Read, of Bloomington, Ill. Received the degree of A. M. from Harvard, in 1888, and Ph. D., "multa cum laude," Freiburg, 1890. Writes: "We spent the latter part of the summer and early fall of 1888 in Switzerland (Berner Oberland) and Southern Germany. During the vacation of 1889 we travelled through the Eastern Alps (Innsbruck, Meran, Cortina, Salzburg, Salzkammergut) to Vienna, returning by way of Prag, Nürnberg, Rothenburg, Heidelberg, to Freiburg."

THOMAS JOHNS ROBINSON.

Has been studying at the Harvard Medical School since graduation.

WILLIAM SANFORD ROBINSON.

"First two years was private assistant to C. Loring Jackson, Professor of Chemistry at Harvard University. Since April, 1889, have been assistant chemist to the Union Pacific Railroad, at Omaha, Neb." Received the degree of A. M. from Harvard, 1888. Reports two articles, in the "Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences," Vol. XXIV., June 23, 1888, and May 28, 1889. "On the Action of Sodium Malonic Estes on Tribromdinitrobenzol," by C. Loring Jackson and W. S. Robinson.

EMERY HERMAN ROGERS.

Resided in Boston until July, 1888, and engaged in the iron business with Rogers & Sheldon. Since July, 1888, has been manager of the D. Webster King Glue Company's store in Chicago. Is a member of the Boston Athletic Club. "Have made sundry visits to the cities adjoining the outskirts of Chicago, as St. Louis, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Detroit, Grand Rapids, etc., with the ever-growing impression that for culture, comfort, and beauty, Boston is the place of all places."

JAMES SAVAGE RUSSELL.

Under date of Feb. 5, 1890, writes from Jacksonville, Fla., on his way to Cuba and Honduras: "From July 13, 1887, to Nov. 11, 1887, I was abroad, and had a fairly rapid but satisfactory trip with my family through England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Isle of Jersey, France, Switzerland, Holland, and Belgium, ending with some shooting in Wales and Ireland before sailing for Boston on the Cunarder 'Pavonia.' For three months I learned something of book-keeping, and tried in vain to improve my handwriting at a commercial college. February, 1890, saw me at 44 State Street, Boston, in the office of Lee, Higginson & Co., bankers and brokers. I have been there since. I am still single, and shall probably remain so until the second triennial; after that I will not answer for. My life in these two years has been quiet and the ordinary work of a new hand, only interrupted by a trip to Nova Scotia in October, 1888, for moose, which I neither shot nor saw; a run west in November and December, 1888, as far as Salt Lake City, and north to Helena, and home by St. Paul; another vacation hunt to New Brunswick, this time also for moose and also barren of result, save a couple of caribou and some salmon trout; a week in October, 1889, to Virginia, on a coal and iron trip; and the expedition upon which I now am, and from which I may never return, as to-day I hear of a revolution in the neighboring Republic. You ask as to clubs. I am a member of the Puritan and Boston Athletic Clubs, and in connection with the latter a very enjoyable event was the triangular eight-oared race between the 'Varsity, the Union Boat Club, and the Athletic crew, last spring. Although defeated, we were not last, and Keyes, Brooks, and myself, respectively numbers 3, 7, and 4, watched, or rather felt, as our eyes were on the back of the man in front, F. S. Coolidge '87 pulling a gallant but hopeless race as No. 7 of the Union crew. In addition to the Puritan and Athletic Clubs, I am a member of the Tariff Reform League, the Ballot Reform Club, and the Loyal Legion. In politics I have voted for Cleveland, and hope to again. My only political creed is independence in the support of the man or party whom I think will give us the most honest government, be it in town, county, State, or the Union. I have not abjured the teachings of Prof. Dunbar, and do still believe in the theory of free trade, but also that the most urgent political reform of to-day is not a changing of the tariff, but a turning of the rascals out, whether they be Republicans or Democrats. Offices of profit I know little of; as to trust and honor, you may judge if marshal of '87 at Commencement in 1888 and 1889, a member of the corporation of the Provident Institution for Savings, a manager of the Board of Control of the Farm School for Boys, a committee-man for the Bussey Institution, will answer your purpose or not."

PHILIP SIDNEY RUST.

Has been studying at the Harvard Law School for the past three years. Admitted to the bar of Suffolk County, Mass., Jan. 14, 1890. Member of the Ames-Gray Law Club, the Choate Chapter, $\Phi \Delta \Phi$, and the Quiz Club, of Dorchester.

ROBERT DE WOLFE SAMPSON.

Has been in Cambridge, studying law at the Harvard Law School.

WILLIAM SAULSBURY.

"Have resided in Dover, Del. In October, 1887, passed the preliminary examination before the bar committee of Kent County, and registered as a student of law under the direction of Hon. Eli Saulsbury. Have also given considerable attention to agriculture. Member of the Dover Lyceum, an organization composed almost entirely of lawyers and law students, which meets every week for the discussion of literary, political, and legal questions. Also a member of the Shakspeare Club, of Wilmington, Del., where we read a play once in two weeks. Among its members are Senators George Gray and Anthony Higgins, Gen. James H. Wilson, Hon. Geo. H. Bates, Judge Leonard E. Wales, Judge Ignatius C. Grubb, and Mayor Austin Harrington. I am also a member of the Democratic Club of the East Dover Hundred. Have always actively supported the Democratic ticket, and have endeavored to secure the best possible nominations. Was a delegate to the National Association of Democratic Clubs, held in Baltimore, July, 1888, but have never held any public office. My only publications have been a few newspaper articles." Addresses before public meetings, "only a few political speeches delivered in Delaware, and a number of addresses to the Dover Lyceum. I have made no extended journeys since leaving college, but have spent a good part of the winters in Washington."

HENRY SCHOFIELD.

"I have been in the Harvard Law School ever since graduation." Was a member of the Ames-Gray Law Club, and of the Choate Chapter, $\Phi \Delta \Phi$, and also an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

GEORGE MARTIN SEELEY.

"The first year after graduation spent in travelling, after which I entered the employ of the New River Mineral Company, at Ivanhoe Furnace, Wythe County, Va., with the intention of studying the metallurgy of iron. I remained with this firm until last March, when I resigned to accept the position of secretary and treasurer to the Ivanhoe Land and Improvement Company, at the same address. Am not married. Am a member of the Harvard Club, of New York."

CHARLES EDWARD SHATTUCK.

"Thou knowest full well what is the life of him who pursues in Cambridge the straight, narrow, and monotonous path of the law-grind. Such a life has been mine for three years, and it follows that I have nothing to tell you. I am not married; neither have I children. I have held no office; received no degree; written no book; joined no club,—except the Young Men's Democratic Club of Massachusetts,—and made no great journeys. Three months in Europe—where I visited seven countries and saw none—and a month in Canada represent my travelling."

EUGENE RODMAN SHIPPEN.

Since graduation has been "pursuing a special course at the Harvard Divinity School. Have preached in Washington, D. C., Boston, Salem, Hingham, Littleton, Newton Centre, Nantucket, and Gloucester, Mass. During the summer of 1887 I visited Scotland, England, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, and France. Met twenty-seven Harvard men while abroad. During the Christmas holidays of 1888 I visited, in company with the Glee Club, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Chicago. Much genuine Harvard enthusiasm in Cincinnati and St. Louis Chicago comparatively indifferent."

ARTHUR CRITTENDEN SMITH.

Has resided in Council Bluffs, Ia., and since Aug. 1, 1887, has been in the dry-goods business with M. E. Smith & Co., Nos. 1101, 1103, 1105, 1107 Howard Street, cor. Eleventh Street, Omaha, Neb., as dress-goods buyer; Dec. 1, 1889, was admitted a partner. Is a member of the Omaha Club. Has travelled from Omaha to New York and Boston four or five times a year.

CHARLES GASTON SMITH.

Has been at the Harvard Law School. Was a member of the Superior Court of the Ames-Gray until ill-health compelled him to resign. Is a member of the Quiz Club, Dorchester, Mass.

HORACE EUGENE SMITH.

Since Sept. 1, 1887, has been with Charles Smith & Sons, 1213 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, bankers. Received the degree of A. B. from Haverford College, 1886. Is a member of the Everett and Logamian Societies of Haverford College, and of the Union League, the Art Club, and the University Club, of Philadelphia.

SAMUEL HERBERT SMITH.

Entered the second-year class of the Harvard Law School in October, 1887, and continued at the school until Jan. 1, 1889, when he was admitted to the Suffolk bar. Has since practised law at 3 Pemberton Square, Boston.

WILLIAM KANAN SMITH.

Entered the Columbia College Law School in the fall of 1887, and remained there until last June, when he received the degree of LL. B. Is understood to have left New York for his home in Oregon.

JOHN LINZEE SNELLING.

"I left college in the summer of 1886, and entered the employ of the N. Y. & N. E. R. R. in their local freight office in Boston. In November of the same year I became a clerk in the general freight office of the Boston & Albany R. R., at Boston, and in January, 1888, took the position of clerk to the general traffic manager of that company, which position I still retain. In June of 1887 I took the degree of A. B with my class."

FRANK CHESTER SOUTHWORTH.

"The first year after graduation I served as instructor in Greek and Latin in Fish's School for Boys, Worcester, Mass. The second year I taught the same subjects in the Adams Academy, Quincy. I was appointed a proctor in Harvard College at the beginning of the college year 1889–90, at which time I also entered the Harvard Divinity School, of which I am at present a member."

WALTER RAYMOND SPALDING.

"My first year as a graduate was spent in studying for the degree of A. M., at Cambridge. Since then I have been teaching in St. Mark's School, Southboro, Mass." Received Harvard's A. M. in June, 1888.

STEPHEN BERRIEN STANTON.

"On leaving Harvard, I entered the Columbia Law School and the School of Political Science. In the latter school I received the degree of A. M. in 1888, and in the former, in June, 1889, the degree of LL. B. Since September of the same year I have been in the office of Evarts, Choate & Beaman, of New York, where I now am engaged in the practice of law." Has published a monograph on the "Behring Sea Dispute," New York, 1890.

LIVINGSTON BOYD STEDMAN.

"I entered Harvard Law School in September, 1887, and completed the year. In the summer of 1888 I was a student in the law office of C. D. & Thos. D. O'Brien, of St. Paul, Minn.; returned to the school in the fall, but after remaining a month in Cambridge accepted a position as private tutor. The winter and spring of 1888–89 were spent in Munich, teaching, with exception of a month in London and Paris. In the fall of 1889 I returned again to the Law School at Harvard. The only societies in which I can claim membership, continued since leaving college, are the Quiz Club, of Dorchester, the Superior Court of the Pow Wow Law Club for 1887–88, and the Choate Chapter, $\Phi \Delta \Phi$."

LAMBERT STERNBERGH.

Spent two years in general travel and study, mainly in Berlin, and Tübingen, Wurtemberg. In August, 1889, returned to the United States; spent his time, up to December, in Cambridge, at the Harvard Law School; since then in Denver, Col. Received the degree of Sc. Pol. D. [Doctor der Staatswissenschaft], Tübingen, 1889.

ALBERT EUGENE STERNE.

Is studying medicine in Berlin. "After leaving Harvard in '87 took a journey to the West of America. Returned to the East in September of the same year, and sailed from New York, Sept. 21, on board the North German Lloyd 'Trave' for Bremen, Germany, after having first visited old Harvard again. Since my arrival in Europe, have travelled throughout Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy, Sicily, Tunis; in Paris during the Exposition, September to October, 1889." Is now studying medicine in Berlin. Is member of the Strassburger Civil Casino, American Students' Club, of Strasburg.

"A short account of the difference between the life of a German student and that of an American student, as represented at Harvard, may be not without interest. The German student is absolutely his own master; not even the police have the power over him, so long as he has his student's card. Of social student life, unless he be a member of some 'corps,' or Verbindung, the German student has no idea whatsoever, except such as he may have in some Beer-Lakal, 'Kneipe' or café, or while playing the national game of 'Skat,' a game somewhat resembling our game of whist, though in principle quite different. In the eyes of a corps student all non-corps students are nonentities, and it seems that the former has more or less right in so doing, for certainly the corps take first place everywhere. What we call athletics is unknown here; the sole exercise of the German student is that which he obtains in duelling — which is very difficult, and requires strength and endurance — and in lifting his huge beer seidel from the table to his mouth, which he does very often. Visits to each others' quarters are almost never made; students meet only at their Kneipe."

SAMUEL STORROW.

Has been studying civil engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston. Spent the winter of 1888 in Florida, and was in Europe during June to September, 1889.

FRANK CALEB STOWELL.

Has resided at Somerville, Mass., and has been employed by the Boston & Lowell and Boston & Maine Railroads, as civil engineer. Reports, "No noteworthy journeys, other than constant travelling over New England."

JOHN OSBORNE SUMNER.

"The first year after graduating I spent at Harvard as a student in history, etc., in the Graduate Department. I was engaged mainly in researches concerning the formation and political history of the late Confederate States. In June, 1888, I went abroad, and after spending the summer in England, France, and Switzerland, I matriculated at the University of Berlin, where I stayed for two semesters, hearing lectures in history and philosophy for the most part. I left Berlin in August, 1889, and after a six-weeks' tricycle tour, with a German friend, through Thuringen, Franconia, and Bavaria, sailed from Bremen late in September for America. On reaching home I again registered as a graduate student at Harvard, and spent the winter in Cambridge and in Washington, working at Confederate history. At the meeting of the American Historical Association, held in Washington in December, I read a paper on the 'Materials for the History of the Government of the Confederate States.'

"On April 26 last I sailed from New York, and am now again registered as a student in the Berlin University. I expect to remain here until August, and in Germany for some time longer."

WINTHROP TISDALE TALBOT.

Has been studying medicine at the Boston University School of Medicine, and was house surgeon at the Massachusetts Homœopathic Hospital, Oct. 1, 1889, to June 1, 1890. Is a member of the Boston Athletic Association and the Channing Club, of Boston.

ELMWOOD GARDNER TEWKSBURY.

H., during the summer of 1889. Has published "The Hebrew and Greek Bible," Hartford, December, 1888. Expects to go to China as a missionary about Sept. 1 of this year.

AARON CLAFLIN THAYER.

Has been studying at the Harvard Law School. Member of the Ames-Gray Law Club, of the Choate Chapter, $\Phi \Delta \Phi$, in which he held the office of Tribune, and an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

HENRY ADAMS THAYER.

Is a real-estate agent and assayer, at Loop Loop, Washington.

CHARLES SPROUL THOMPSON.

At present is one of the freight contracting agents for the Illinois Central Railroad.

ERNEST ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

"Went into business in November, 1887, as clerk for the firm of A. A. Thomson & Co., of New York, importers of tin plates, sheet iron, zinc, etc. I remained with the above firm until January, 1890, and have since lived an uneventful life." Member of the Racquet Court Club, the New York Athletic Club, and the New York and Coney Island Jockey Clubs.

BARCLAY TILTON.

Went abroad immediately after graduation, and on his return, in September, 1887, entered the office of his brother, J. B. Tilton, 17 Congress Street, Boston, broker, where he still is.

ROBERT TRUSLOW.

"From September, 1887, until the end of the next year I was with the Century Company, publishers. I taught in a Brooklyn school until the following June, went West for my health, and in December last got a place on the city staff of the Tribune. I hope to make newspaper work my profession." Is a member of the New York Harvard Club.

JOSEPH BROWN THOMAS TUTHILL.

The first year after graduation was a post-graduate student at Harvard, and assistant to Prof. Jackson in Chem. 1. Since then has been teaching science at Riverview Military Academy, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Received the degree of A. M. at Harvard in June, 1888. Is a non-resident member of the New York Harvard Club, and a member of the Vassar Institute (scientific society), Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Writes: "I have been engaged in teaching since leaving college, but have not fully made up my mind to follow that occupation permanently. It is not altogether congenial to me, and I am, on the whole, desirous of making some change."

GEORGE HERMAN TUTTLE.

The first year was prevented from doing any work by illness: since then has spent one year at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, and one at the Harvard Medical School.

ALFRED LEE TYLER.

"In January, 1888, I went abroad, and spent eight months making the customary trip on the Continent and through England. On my return to Alabama in September, I went to work at once for the Woodstock Iron Company, of which my father is president. In January, 1889, I was appointed assistant superintendent of that company, and held the position until August. I then entered the First National Bank here, to learn book-keeping, and on the 10th of last December I was made secretary and treasurer and appointed auditor of the Anniston & Atlantic and Anniston & Cincinnati Railroad companies, two railroads which are owned and controlled by the Louisville & Nashville system. I hold these positions still, and hope to continue doing so. I am still unmarried."

FRANK VOGEL.

From September, 1887, to June, 1888, taught modern languages and literature at Mitchell's Boys' School, Billerica, Mass., and since then has been Instructor of Modern Languages at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Made a voyage to and through Europe in 1889, visiting Belgium, Holland, France, Switzerland, and Germany.

FRANK LAWSON WALKER.

"I have been at my home in Beverly ever since I graduated. In the fall of 1887 I started a private school at Beverly, and have run it now for three years. So far I have had only day scholars, but next year I propose to take boarding pupils as well. I am as yet unmarried, and belong to no societies."

JOSEPH EUGENE WALKER.

"Immediately after leaving college, I accepted a position as instructor in Latin and Greek and mathematics in Shortlidge Media Academy, where I am at present employed. In the summer of 1888 I went abroad, travelled in Belgium and Switzerland, and spent three months studying the French language and monuments at Paris. I am not married."

EUGENE CARROLL WEBSTER.

"Since my graduation from college in June, 1887, my residence has been in New Haven, Conn., where I have been engaged in the study of theology in the Yale Theological Seminary. My seminary course ends May 14, 1890. During the first two vacations after leaving college, I was in the employ of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and last summer I was preaching in the Congregational Church in Hiram, Me. In June, 1889, I received a license to preach, upon examination by the New Haven West Association of Ministers. In March, 1890, I received a unanimous call to become the pastor of the United Congregational Church, in East Providence, R. I., where I began active service April 23. I shall be ordained and installed on the twenty-eighth day of May. During the early part of the summer I expect to be married to Miss Wynn M. Ward, of New Haven. At the close of the seminary course, Yale University confers the degree of Bachelor of Divinity upon the graduates of the seminary.

"Since leaving college I have written the following articles, besides having done all the seminary correspondence for one of the local papers: A historical article about John Dixwell, a regicide judge, and the collating of hitherto unpublished manuscripts, New Haven Register, April 7, 1889; 'Students' Summer Vacation Work,' Congregationalist, Nov. 14, 1889."

ALONZO ROGERS WEED.

Tried teaching for a time, but did not like it, and entered the Law School of Boston University in the fall of 1887, where he has since "been leading the humdrum and toilsome life of a law student." Has resided at home, in Newton.

WINTHROP WETHERBEE.

Has been a clerk in the office of Foote & French, bankers and brokers, Boston, since February, 1888. Is a member of the First Corps Cadets, M. V. M., and the Boston Athletic Association. Has taken a little part in local politics, and written occasional verses in sundry periodicals. Spent the summer of 1887 in Europe, travelling in England and on the Continent until September of that year.

ARTHUR WILLIAM WHEELWRIGHT.

Has been studying architecture in Boston, and is at present studying in Paris.

SUMNER WHEELER WHITE.

Has been with Heoninghaus & Curtiss, of New York, importers, since June 20, 1888. Immediately after graduation went abroad, and spent three months in travelling through France, Germany, and Switzerland.

GEORGE GILL WHITELAW.

Since November, 1887, has been with the Greeley-Burnham Grocer Company, St. Louis, Mo. Was married Oct. 16, 1889, to Miss Fredrika Lee Allison, daughter of Matthew Corry and Frances Ekin Allison, of Nashville, Tenn. Is a member of the University Club.

BENJAMIN WHITNEY.

Immediately after graduating entered the employ of Lewis F. Perry, of Boston, as superintendent of a glass painting and decorating establishment at West Medford, Mass. June 11, 1888, married Miss Annie D. Perry, daughter of Lewis F. and Olive A. Perry, of Boston.

FRANK BEECHER WIESTLING.

"I lived in Harrisburg, Pa., from July, 1887, to April, 1888. In April, 1888, I left Pennsylvania for Northern Colorado for the benefit of my health. I spent several pleasant months there, hunting and fishing and riding. In the early fall of 1888 I returned to Harrisburg, to resume my law studies under the tutorage of my father. I spent the next six months in study. In April, 1889, I left Pennsylvania for Washington, and located in Seattle. I continued my law studies with my father, who had also moved to Seattle. I was admitted to practise in all the courts of Washington, in November, 1889, and am now in partnership with my father, under the firm name of Wiestling & Wiestling. . . . I have not played base-ball much since leaving college. I have played a deal of tennis and a little foot-ball. We have a good many college athletes in Seattle, and we are about to organize an athletic association. There are beautiful lakes and harbors in Western Washington, finely adapted to regattas. The new athletic association will have rowing in view. I have joined the Havard Club of the Northwest. This club meets once a year in one of the cities of Idaho, Oregon, or Washington. We have about one hundred members."

WALDO WICKHAM WILLARD.

"Since leaving college I have remained in Cambridge as a member of the Harvard Law School. I am not married, have received no degrees, have become a member of no society. I went to England last summer, as a member of a base-ball team composed of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, and Dartmouth men. Our purpose was to instruct Englishmen in the game. We met with very fair success, and had an enjoyable trip."

HARRY JOHNSON WOOD.

Since August, 1887, has been a member of the firm of C. B. Woods & Co., manufacturers, Boston. Was married Jan. 8, 1890, to Miss Eleanor Murray Dorr, daughter of Moses and Sarah Dorr, of Cambridge.

JAMES HAUGHTON WOODS.

Until the summer of 1889 studied at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge. Spent the summer in travel in Europe, and has been studying at Berlin during the past winter. Also spent the summer of 1887 in Europe.

RICHARD AUGUSTUS ZEREGA.

During the summer of 1887 resided at Pelham Manor, N. Y. From October of that year to the following January was in Berlin; from January to May, 1888, in Heidelberg; and from May to November, at Göttingen. Since then has been in New York. From December, 1888, to February, 1890, was a banking clerk in the employ of Dickinson & Alling; no present occupation. Member of the St. Nicholas Club and Harvard Club, of New York, $\Delta\ \Phi$, the New York Jockey Club, Knickerbocker Bowling Club, Badminton Club, and the City Reform Club. Has made a trip to Georgia and Florida.

OSCAR THEODORE ZINKEISEN.

Went West almost immediately after graduation, and is now in the real-estate business with Augustin & Kennedy, Spokane Falls, Wash.

ROBERT PAYNE BIGELOW.

"The first year after graduation I spent in Washington, except a short vacation in the summer, during which I attended the meeting, in New York, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, when I gave an abstract of my graduating thesis, 'On the Structure of the Frond in Champia Parvula.' The thesis was published in full in the 'Proceedings of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences,' Vol. XXIII., page 111. My time during this year was spent in helping my father with his business affairs, and in getting them into such shape that I could take charge of them during his absence from the country. He started on an extended tour in March, 1888.

"Towards the close of the following summer I found that I could arrange my business so as to occupy only one or two days in each week. With this amount of spare time on my hands, and with the Johns Hopkins University near by, I was enabled to carry out a long-cherished scheme, and in October, 1888, I entered here as a candidate for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. My father returned to Washington last September, and since then I have devoted myself entirely to my work here. My principal subject is animal morphology, and my subordinate subjects, animal physiology and botany. During the last summer I was occupant of the Johns Hopkins University table in the United States Fish Commission laboratory, at Woods Holl, and recently I was appointed to a university scholarship.

"In November I was initiated into the B Θ Π Fraternity, of which there is here a flourishing chapter."

GEORGE HOWARD PARKER.

Was Assistant in geology for the year 1887–88, and is now Instructor in the same subject at Harvard. Is a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, and of the American Society of Naturalists, and also biologist of the Massachusetts State Board of Health (1887–89). Has published "The Eyes in Scorpions," Bull. Mus. Comparative Zoology, at Harvard College, Vol. XIII., No. 6, December, 1887; Report of the Biologist in Nineteenth Annual Report State Board of Health of Massachusetts, 1888; "A Preliminary Account of the Development and Histology of the Eyes in the Lobster," Proc. Am. Acad., 1888, XXIV.; State Board of Health on Springfield's Water Supply, Report of the Biologist, Springfield Republican, Sept. 24, 1889.

FRANK HAROLD SELLERS.

"I have but little to send you of myself. Indeed, it seems strange that with such great effort so little should be done in so long a time. After a few weeks in a canoe up in the pine woods of Michigan and Wisconsin, recuperating after the labors of the Photographic Committee, the frantic attempts to collect the unpaid subscriptions of the Harvard Monthly, and the fearful endeavors to secure a degree, I went into the employ of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, of this city [Chicago]. My progress has not been phenomenal, yet I have passed many who were my superiors by several years. The business is largely legal, — the examination of titles to real estate; an occupation entirely at variance with my former work and tastes. To sum up my career, as I shall be handed down to posterity in the laconic words of the city directory, I am a clerk and board with my parents. I still remain true to my vows of bachelorhood, and spend considerable time in the comfortable rooms of the University Club. I am a member of some of the smaller literary and social clubs, yet my favorite, by far, is the University Club. I also attend the meetings of the Sunset Club, a large dinner club, composed of the brightest men of the city, where very animated discussions are held on political subjects. I have done no writing for publication, nor taken any long journeys, other than one of several weeks in the deserts of our Southwestern Territories during the summer months. As I have been there several times before, and my predilection for our savages is well known, I shall not dilate upon the subject. I shall probably remain in my present business for some time, as my prospects are encouraging."

TEMPORARY MEMBERS.

A brief account is given below of those temporary members of 1887 who have answered any of the Secretary's circulars, or of whom he has been able to learn anything.

SAMUEL ABBOTT.

January, 1888, entered the employ of Heywood Bros., manufacturers of bamboo furniture, Wakefield, Mass., and is at present engaged in the same business in Gardner, Mass. While at Wakefield, edited The Collegian. Received the degree of A. B. from Williams, in 1887, and has been president of the New England Intercollegiate Press Association since 1887; was also secretary of the Democratic Town Committee of Wakefield, in November, 1889, and "worked hard for Russell."

WILLIAM SYLVESTER ALLEN.

Received the Harvard A. B. in 1888, and since that time has been studying law at Greenfield, Mass.

GASTON MEARS ASHE.

Since leaving college has been studying law at San Francisco. Was admitted to practise law in the Supreme Court of California, at Sacramento, in May, 1889, and is now practising by himself. Is a member of the Harvard Club of San Francisco. Of his practice he writes: "I have been doing fairly well; most of my practice has been in criminal law."

WINTHROP FOREST ATWOOD.

Is with B. S. Atwood, box manufacturer, of Whitman, Mass. Is a member of Puritan Lodge, A. F. & A. M.; Pilgrim Chapter, R. A. M.; Abington Council, R. & S. M.; Old Colony Commandery, K. T.

ALEXANDER ROBERT BAUM.

"Studied law while clerk in the office of Van Ness & Roche, attorneys at law, San Francisco, and attended Hastings Law School of the University of California for one year, and thereafter studied privately until May 7, 1888, when I was admitted to the bar, after an examination before the Supreme Court at Sacramento. Opened an office and practised by myself until Aug. 1, 1889, when I entered into partnership with Andrew Thorne, under the firm name and style of Thorne & Baum."

Was married July 31, 1888, at Healdsburg, Sonoma County, Cal., to Miss Loulu Scott, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and daughter of Julius and Mary E. Scott. May 4, 1889, at Almeda, Almeda County, Cal., twins born, Charles and Ethel Scott Baum.

Is a life member of the Society of California Pioneers, a member of the Halcyon Parlor, No. 146, N. S. G. W. (Native Sons of the Golden West), and of Gray Eagle Tribe, No. 65, I. O. R. M. (Improved Order of Red Men). Has taken no part in politics, except to vote, generally the Democratic ticket.

"My first intention was to give some instructions in quieting lively little twin babies, that think night comes solely for the purpose of enabling them to practise their voices and exercise their lungs; but since there are so many of dear old '87 still unmarried, I will not give you a description of my experiences in this line, lest some of my classmates, hearing of them, should become unwilling to grant me the last laugh."

CONWAY RATHBONE BROWNE.

Died Dec. 31, 1883.

HENRY GOODNOW BRUCE.

Received the degree of A. B. from Harvard in 1888: since then has been tutoring and writing in Worcester and Boston, Mass., and in London and the South of England. Besides the voyage to England, has made a trip to the South, and one to the Mediterranean and England. Has written in "Matters of America," Dodd, Mead & Co., 1890, a "Life of Gen. Oglethorpe," now in press; and has the "Life of Gen. Houston" in preparation.

CHARLES CARROLL.

Has not replied.

ROBERT MAXWELL CHESEBOROUGH.

After leaving Harvard, studied two years at Columbia College Law School, and for a time in the office of F. R. Condeil. Then he went to the Sandwich Islands, from which he returned 1888; nothing further has been heard from him.

ARTHUR COCHRANE.

Arthur Cochrane, son of Silas Morris and Charlotte Clark (Rockwood) Cochrane, was born at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 27, 1864. He fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, and entered Harvard in the fall of 1883 as a member of the Class of 1887. He immediately took a prominent place in his class, especially as an athlete, and was chosen captain of the Freshman eleven. His excellent work in this capacity will be long remembered by every '87 man, as will his successful efforts as captain and anchor of the Freshman tug-of-war team of that year. He left college at the end of his Freshman year, and entered the employ of a grain-receiving house in Chicago; later he took charge of an elevator at Chillicothe, Ill., for the same house. Last spring he went to Kansas City, Mo., where he accepted a position as city solicitor for the Glidden & Joy Varnish Company, May 18, a position which he held at the time of his death, Aug. 17, 1889. For a few days he had been complaining of feeling slightly ill, and on his return from work, Aug. 17, had summoned a physician. At eleven o'clock he replied to a friend that he was resting well, and needed nothing. This was the last time he was seen alive. At four o'clock the next morning his body was found on the sidewalk under his window, badly bruised, and the top of the head crushed in. He had a slight fever, and it is supposed that during the night he went to the window for the sake of the cool, fresh air, and lost his balance while sitting there.

At a meeting of the class, held at Cambridge, Oct. 4, 1889, a committee were appointed who reported the following resolutions: —

By the accidental death of Arthur Cochrane, in Kansas City, Mo., the Class of 1887 loses one of its most promising members. Although with the class for only one year, he was well known to its members through his active part in athletics, in which he early showed the great courage and energy which marked his career in the West.

He was a favorite for his kindness, sturdy independence, and earnestness, which undoubtedly would have brought him much success had he lived.

We deeply regret his early death, and desire to express to his family our sincere sympathy in their affliction.

JEFFERSON B. FLETCHER,

MAX GOEPP.

Since the spring of 1885 has been stock raising and proving up land, at Pueblo, Col., with P. B. Schweinitz. Writes, under date of April 1, 1890: "I have just arrived in San Diego, with the expectation of establishing myself here."

DANIEL PAINE GRISWOLD.

Since Oct. 1, 1888, has been studying law in the office of Seward, Da Costa & Guthrie, New York. Was married at All Souls' Church, New York, Jan. 25, 1888, to Miss Annie Robe, daughter of James Banks and Eliza (Rudd) Robe, of Liverpool, England. Is a member of the Harvard Club of New York, and of the Calumet Club, of Providence, R. I.

RICHARD HODGES GUSHEE.

"Since I left Harvard, which was at the beginning of the Junior year, I have been in different parts of the country for my health. For three years I was in the South, the first two of which I spent at the University of the South, Suannee, Tenn., where I took the degree of A. B. in Greek. It is necessary to go to a smaller college to appreciate the immense superiority of Harvard, both in the scope and broadness of education and the morale of the men. I do not mean this as a reflection on the University of the South, for it is quite as good, if not better, than the majority of smaller colleges. After leaving the University, I spent a year in Georgia, North Carolina, and Florida. During the last year I have made my headquarters in Cambridge, taking several trips, short ones, around the Northern States and Canada. This spring I came to California, for my health, by way of Central America. I now expect to settle here, but any communication addressed to 30 Lee Street, Cambridge, will reach me."

JAMES WINSLOW HALL.

Studied at Cambridge, 1887–88. Since May 1, 1889, has been with Hall Bros., ship builders, Port Blakeley, Wash. "Went from Boston to Port Blakeley in 1888, by steamer to Baltimore, thence by rail to Vancouver, B. C., with stops at Washington, D. C., Chicago, St. Paul, and Winnipeg; thence by steamer to Seattle and Port Blakeley. "The most lasting impression received on this journey was the grandeur of the mountain scenery along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway." Also reports a hurried trip to San Francisco by steamer in January, 1890.

SAMUEL COWAN HENNING.

Since Jan. 1, 1887, has been in the real-estate and fire-insurance business in Louisville, Ky., with J. W. Henning's Sons. Visited Europe in the summer of 1889.

BENJAMIN BYRON HOFFMAN.

Is with the Standard Thread Company, of New York, of which he is secretary. Has received the degree of A. B. from the College of the City of New York. Is a member of the Harvard Club, of New York, the Philokalia Literary Society, the Society for Ethical Culture, $\Phi \Delta X$ Fraternity, and the Young Men's Democratic Club. Spent eight months in Europe last year, travelling in France, Germany, and Italy. Stopped several months among the German students at Freiburg and Baden.

HENRY CUTTER HOLT.

Has resided in Winchester, Mass., and studied architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, and in a Boston office. Since June 1, 1889, has been with Cabot, Everett & Mead, architects. "Spent the summer of 1888 on a large ranch in Colorado, and found the occupation of 'cow punching' agreeable and healthful." Subsequently, with a member of '86, I visited points of interest in Colorado, Utah, and California."

CHARLES FRANK HOOVER.

Has been studying medicine at the Harvard Medical School.

EDWARD V. KAMINSKI.

Has been engaged in the silk importing business in New York with the firm of H. M. Kaminski, since September, 1886. Received the degree of A. B. from the College of the City of New York. Has made "several trips abroad for business purposes, averaging one or two a year. During these have visited Great Britain, France, Switzerland, Germany, and Austria. These visits being on business, and on each occasion somewhat curtailed, left but little opportunity for study, and whatever impressions were received were entirely from a commercial stand-point, and hardly deep enough to be interesting."

JOHN HOWLAND LOTHROP.

Was in Boston in the employ of Miner, Beal & Hackett, wholesale clothing dealers, from Oct. 1, 1884, until Jan. 1, 1887. Since that time has been in Omaha with the Union Pacific Railway.

ARTHUR SYLVESTER LURIA.

"I left college in June, 1885, spent the summer abroad, visiting England, Belgium, and Switzerland, and in October entered the Columbia Law School, and graduated from there in June, 1887, receiving the degree of LL. B. In September, 1887, I started on a two-months' vacation in the far West, spending a fortnight in the Yellowstone Park and a week in the Yosemite Valley, returning to New York in November, when I entered my father's law office, and was admitted to the bar in June, 1888. In September, 1888, I revisited my old home and birthplace, Columbus, Ga. On Nov. 21, after voting for Cleveland (my only political action), I started for a year's travel, visiting France in December, Italy in January, Egypt in February and March, Syria, Constantinople, and Greece in April, Austria in May, the Exposition at Paris in June, Norway in July and half of August, returning home in September last past. Since then I have been actively engaged in my profession, except for a month spent in New Orleans during the winter. I am unmarried, and trust shall long so remain. I am a member of the Lotus Club, of New York, two Southern clubs, and one English society; have made no speeches, issued no books, and have held no office, unless you should deem being a notary public an office." Is now in the office of the attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company.

WILLIAM DOMINICK LYNCH.

William Dominick Lynch was born at [illegible], Aug. 8, 1864. Since early childhood his home was in New York City. He was educated at Georgetown College, D. C., whence he graduated in 1885. He then entered Harvard, and became a member of '87. His friends in class and college were [illegible] to come to Cambridge without acquaintances, and found his class at a very [illegible]. While in college he was a member of the Pierian Society and of the Signal.

In the fall of 1887 he entered the Harvard Medical School, and [illegible] the same year went to New York, and continued his medical [illegible].

Early in 1889 he fell into ill health; his sickness steadily increased, in spite of treatment, and he died on June 18, 1889, [illegible] his last [illegible] days. He suffered from acute Bright's disease.

The few who knew him will remember him as a [illegible] and [illegible] generous friend, and as a loyal, frank, and [illegible] companion. J. D. E.

IRVING SAMUEL MEREDITH.

Was for some time a reporter on the staff of the Boston Journal. Afterward went abroad, returning in the fall of 1889 to prepare for the ministry. Is now studying at the Union Theological Seminary, New York.

WALLACE NUTTING.

After leaving college, took a theological course at Hartford and Union seminaries, and in May, 1888, became pastor of the Belleville Avenue Congregational Church, in Newark, N. J., where he remained one year. Thence he removed to St. Paul, Minn., where he is now pastor of the Park Congregational Church. Installed Nov. 14, 1889. Writes: "The church has doubled in membership since May, 1889, the date of my removal here. Sixteen thousand dollars raised this year for current expenses and benevolence." Was married June 5, 1888, at Coleraine, Mass., to Miss Mabel Griswold, of Buckland, Mass., daughter of Josiah W. and Ann E. (Davis) Griswold. Is a member of the Minnesota Congregational Club, before which he has delivered an address on "The Unity of the Church." Reports a trip to the Yellowstone, Pacific coast, Alaska, and Canadian Northwest. "Delightful trip, it taken early in the summer. A thousand miles of inland voyage."

EDWARD WARREN ORDWAY.

Visited Europe in the spring and summer of 1885, travelling in England, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, and Germany, and again in 1887, spending six months. Is now on another trip abroad for six months. Was a member of the first-year class, Harvard Law School, 1888–89. "On account of sickness I was obliged to give up my second-year law studies. On my return next fall, if I recover my health, shall finish my law course at Columbia College, New York, probably."

WILLIAM HESSELTINE PEAR.

Since Nov. 1, 1888, has been connected with the Boston Children's Aid Society. Writes: "My life since leaving college has been very busy, but quiet and uneventful. I have not married, nor joined any club, with the exception of a local dramatic organization. I have become engaged to Miss Fanny Carleton Bradley, of Cambridge, and in 1893 I may be able to give an account of a brief period of married life."

WILBUR SANFORD POND.

Left college to enter into some mining operations in South Carolina. Later went to Chicago, where he now is, in the office of the C., R. I. & P. Railroad.

WILLIAM BACON SCOFIELD.

"I have been waiting in the hope of attaining sudden distinction, at least in wife and progeny. As the time limit is reached, I must give you the scanty record. I am now, and have been for over a year, city editor of the Worcester Evening Gazette. I am a member of the Worcester Club and of the Quinsigamond Boat Club, of Worcester. That is all. You see I still count as my chief distinction that I was once Secretary of '87."

THOMAS BLYTHE SCOTT.

Has been at Alexander, Ia., and lately at St. Paul, Minn., attending to his own investments, mainly in land and timber. Married at Nashville, Tenn., June 6, 1889, to Miss Mary Lee Clare, daughter of William and Mary H. Clare, of Nashville. Is a member of the Minnesota Club.

EDMUND SAMUEL SPALDING.

The Secretary learns that after leaving college he went into a broker's office in New York; in January, 1888, he was a member of the Consolidated Exchange, and on his own account, doing well.

Sailed from New York for Hamburg, Aug. 16, 1888, and proceeded at once to Leipzig, where he spent the year 1888–89. Travelled from April 1, 1890, till May 10 following, and then settled in Heidelberg. Has published "Phillips Exeter Academy," "The Granite Monthly," March, 1887; "Belknap Grammar School," pamphlet, 1885; "The Back River School District," 1887. "The Old Landing School District," "The Toland School District," and "The Upper Factory School District," 1888, pamphlets; "Dover Gubernatorial Candidates in 1852," "The Granite Monthly," January and February, 1889; and a letter on German Politics, in Foster's Daily Democrat, Dover, N. H., Feb. 12, 1890.

EBEN BLANCHARD THAXTER.

Is studying at the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge. "My support has been derived from the profits of work at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and of painting."

STANLEY MAJOR TODD.

Stanley Major Todd died at the Albany City Hospital, Dec. 22, 1889, from congestion of the brain. He was born in Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1864, and was fitted for college at the Cortland High School and the Albany Academy. In the fall of 1883 he entered Harvard College as a special student, and was admitted three years later as a regular member of the Class of '87. He went abroad during the fall of 1887, and spent two years at the School of Political Sciences in Paris. He returned home to Stockton during the summer of 1889, and was elected a delegate to the Republican State Convention at Saratoga the following fall. Last September he entered the Columbia School of Political Sciences, where he was until his final illness, a candidate for the degree of Ph. D.

E. C. S.

THOMAS RICE VARICK.

Since August, 1885, has been in business with John B. Varick & Co., of Manchester, N. H. Married June 26, 1889, at Manchester, N. H., to Miss Mary Miller, daughter of Nathaniel Jones and Sara Peters Miller, of Bangor, Me.

JOSEPH SWIFT WHISTLER.

Has been travelling abroad, the Secretary understands.

JOHN DEAN BROWN.

Studied some time at the Harvard Law School, and then returned to Pittsburg, where he continued his studies, and was admitted to the bar of Alleghany County, Pa., in June, 1889. He is now practising law with A. M. Brown, Esq., of Pittsburg.

THOMAS MARSHALL BROWN.

Since leaving college has been studying law at Pittsburg, Pa., and was admitted to the bar of Alleghany County, in June, 1889. Is now practising in the office of Brown & Lambie, Pittsburg. Has taken part in politics to some extent in the cause of the Republican party.

WILLIAM HENRY NAGLE.

Has been engaged in the wool and leather business since October, 1885, with the firm of Farrell, Nagle & Power. Is a member of the Bay State Club, the Boston Athletic Association, the Town Club, and the Bostonian Society. Has taken trips to Ireland, Scotland, England, and France, as well as to Florida and other States in this country. "When in Florida, purchased a pineapple plantation and worked it for six months, and then abandoned it."

CLASS BABY.

Some time in June, 1885, it was reported that a new member had been added to our class, and in October the official announcement came from B. L. Robinson that there had been born to him, at Strasburg, Germany, May 28, 1885, a daughter, to whom the name Chriemhild had been given. No other claimant appearing, the Secretary and Chairman of the Class Committee, after consultation with the happy father and their fellow members of the committee, selected a silver bowl and spoon, suitably engraved, as a substitute for the traditional cradle, following in this respect the precedent set by '84 and '85. The bowl, which was seen by most of you at Commencement last year, was immediately shipped to Mr. Robinson, and its receipt duly acknowledged.

Of the class baby herself, her father writes: —

"The class baby is well and thriving. She has blue eyes, light curly hair, and a lively disposition. Having had a German nurse until recently, she can now talk both German and English, with considerable accuracy for a child of her age. Although rather too young to understand the honor of being connected with the Class of '87, she can already say Rah! Rah! Rah! with much enthusiasm."

CLASS MEETINGS.

The meetings of the class since graduation have been confined to the usual reunions at Commencement, when 53 Thayer has been our headquarters. These meetings have been of a purely social character, no business of any kind being transacted. Once only has a formal meeting of the class been called. On 4 1889, at the call of Secretary, a meeting was held in the East Lecture Room of Austin Hall (Law School), Cambridge, to take appropriate action on the death of our classmate, Herman Timothy Coolidge. In the absence of the Chairman of the Class Committee, the Secretary presided. Messrs. Hyde, Pinkham, and Weed were appointed a committee to prepare suitable resolutions, with instructions to report in print and to forward a copy to the bereaved family. At the same meeting, Messrs. G. P. Baker, Fletcher, and Oakes were appointed a committee to report resolutions on the death of a former member of the class, Arthur Cochrane, whose sudden death had been reported but a short time before. The resolutions reported in each case may be found above, under the name of each member.

CLASS FUND.

Since the publication of the last report, four new subscriptions have been made, aggregating $135, but during the same time one subscription of $100, which appears to have been inserted by mistake, has been withdrawn, and three of our subscribers have died, leaving unpaid subscriptions to the amount of $50 more. It should also be stated that twenty members have paid their subscriptions in full, anticipating $412.

The class has now on interest $4,180, invested as follows: $2,000 in 6% debenture bonds of the American Loan and Trust Company, of Omaha, Neb., secured by mortgages deposited with the Union Trust Company, of New York; $1,000 in a 6% mortgage guaranteed by the Lombard Investment Company of Boston; $980 in the Roxbury Institution for Savings; and $200 in the Suffolk Savings Bank, Boston.

The amount of subscriptions due and unpaid is as follows: —

28 subscribers owe	3	instalments	. . .	$916 00
21 "	" 2	"	. . . .	265 00
37 "	" 1	"	. . . .	214 00
Total due and unpaid			. . . .	$1,395 00

The moral of these last figures is obvious.

A summary of the trial balance will be found at the end of the report.

HARVARD, 1887 TO 1890.*

BY JEFFERSON BUTLER FLETCHER

The course of Harvard for the past three years has been steadily onward towards greater liberalism in study and university methods in government. '87 saw the studies of the Freshman year made mostly elective, and all religious service made voluntary. In 1887–88 the Freshmen gained access to the departments of Italian, Spanish, and music. Meanwhile the elective system is spreading into the professional schools. The whole course in the Medical School has been revised; two hours a week of elective studies have been introduced into the third year, and all the fourth year work made elective. Now, at the close of 1889–90, comes the announcement that the Faculty itself has been abolished, and that the statutes of the University have been changed somewhat to the following effect: —

There is a new governing board, called the University Council. It consists of the President, professors, and assistant professors, and such other University officials as the corporation, with the consent of the Overseers, may appoint. The function of the Council is to consider questions which concern more than one Faculty, and questions of University policy.

Harvard College, the Lawrence Scientific School, and the Graduate School are under the immediate charge of a single Faculty of Arts and Sciences. The other schools have each a Faculty. The President is a member of each Faculty. Each Faculty has a dean, and may appoint an administrative board, — in no case less than fifteen for Harvard College, — to control ordinary matters of administration and discipline.

It was also voted to change the requirements for degrees so as to encourage the three-years' course, and to check specializing. This change will, when effected, lay the ghost of a problem that has been haunting the college world for several years. As yet, however, no definitive action has been taken; the Overseers are considering.

* It may not be out of place to state here that the Harvard Monthly now publishes a regular and admirable summary of current events.

While these changes, on close inspection, appear formal rather than material, appear to recognize in statutes existing conditions rather than to create new conditions, nevertheless statutory recognition is of itself calculated to produce new reforms by the countenance it has given to previous reforms.

There are sadder changes to record. Death has removed from the list of our teachers Profs. Gray (died Jan. 30 1888), Young (March 2, 1888), and Bowen (Jan. 21, 1890), and Mr. Sawin (Dec. 29, 1889). Prof. Bowen had served the college for forty years, for thirty-six as full professor. This remarkable service is eclipsed, however, by that of Prof. Lovering, who resigned in 1887–88, after continuous instruction as Hollis Professor for fifty years. He has been made Hollis Professor Emeritus. Among other resignations may be mentioned those of Assistant Profs. Laughlin and Preble, in 1888.

The new requirements for admission, made in 1886, by which liberal alternatives to Greek could be offered in science, history, modern languages, English, and mathematics, were first put into complete operation in 1887–88. They "have already stimulated," says President Eliot, in his report for that year, "the teaching of French and German in secondary schools, and have promoted the introduction of laboratory methods of studying physics and chemistry. That the new options at the examination are welcome, is proved by the large use already made of them." This use has considerably extended during the two succeeding years.

An interesting extension of the University are the summer courses, which have increased from 2 courses in 1886, not counting those offered by the Medical School, to 8 in 1889; and the attendance, for the most part teachers, from 76 to 188 in the same time.

The Graduate Department, in which it would seem that the university idea must best fertilize itself, has gained, but not rapidly; this year there have been 107 graduate students to 96 in 1887–88. The recent changes in favor of a three-years' undergraduate course will probably benefit the Graduate Department, since more men can afford the time requisite for a higher degree.

Last year, as a reply to certain aspersions cast upon Harvard from without, a committee of graduate and undergraduate students from other colleges published a report testifying to the "high moral tone, intellectual earnestness, and general advantages of Harvard University." "There were in Harvard College and the Graduate Department 97 such students, who had come from no fewer than 64 different institutions, and of this number 73 answered the inquiries of the committee." Considering the frequent vilification of all things Harvardian, this friendly support cannot fail to gratify all Harvard men.

Absurd as most newspaper or magazine attacks upon Harvard have been in their cheap sensationalism and vulgar exaggeration, they nevertheless frightened very many people, among the rest the Overseers. These appointed a committee to investigate. Much discussion and some warm feeling ensued between the investigators on the one hand and the Faculty and students on the other. The result was a considerable change of a somewhat conservative nature in the college rules and regulations; and also an innovation in the shape of the so-called Freshman Advisers. A well-advised step was the abolishment of the anomalous "extra" studies, in which a man could obtain credit without reference to his attendance in course. The Freshman Advisers consist of a committee of thirteen members of the Faculty, each of whom is supposed to have some twenty-five Freshmen under his wing. The relationship may of course be as paternal and confidential as individual circumstances make possible, but naturally the main point of contact is the question of choice of studies.

Materially, the University was never so prosperous. The number of students has steadily increased, thus:—

	1896–97.	1897–98.	1898–99.	1899–1900.
University	1,688	1,812	1,899	2,079
College	1,077	1,138	1,160	1,271

This shows a gain in four years of 391 for the University, and of 194 for the college. During the same period the teaching staff has risen from 179 to 217, and the total volume of instruction from 175½ to 180½ courses.

It is a pleasing obverse to this pleasing picture which records the fact that "the cost of living in Cambridge is lower now than at any time since 1861."*

* President's Report for 1899–1900, page 6.

Opportunity for this greater economy is in the cost of board rather than of lodging. Room-rent is scarcely lower than in our time, notwithstanding several new dormitories. Of these, two belong to the University: Hastings Hall, situated on North Avenue, west of Holmes Field, and the Foxcroft House at the corner of Kirkland and Oxford Streets. Hastings Hall contains 36 double and 25 single rooms, at an average rental of $275; Foxcroft House supplies 8 rooms, at an average rental of $178. Obviously, such rooms are not in demand among poor men.

On the other hand, the Foxcroft Club, which was organized last year by a number of instructors and students, occupies, rent free, the lower floor of Foxcroft House, and hopes to supply meals at not more than $3 a week. Furthermore, the club will provide its members with a reading-room and lockers, and eventually with reference books. Thus, indirectly, it will go far to compensate for the high room-rent in Cambridge, near the college, by rendering it possible for a poor student, without serious inconvenience, to sleep at home or at a considerable distance from the yard.

Apropos of dormitories, there has gone into operation this year a new system in the care of them. The chief improvement is the centralization of power in the hands of a single janitor, responsible only to the Bursar for the direction of our domestic department. The number of goodies has been wisely and humanely increased. They and the porters now wear a "distinctive uniform." All business transactions, for extra services, blacking boots, and the like, take place between the students and the Bursar without intermediary.

Besides Hastings Hall, the most noteworthy additions to the University property are the new wings of the University Museum, which now complete about three fourths of the great quadrangle planned by Prof. Agassiz, in 1859. The floor area of the natural-history portion of the Museum, not including the Peabody Museum of Archæology, is four acres.

For at present purely ornamental purposes is the new ten-thousand dollar gateway between Massachusetts and Harvard Halls. It is of eighteenth-century English style, and built of brick, with panels of Yorkshire sandstone; the very elaborate gates and canopy are of wrought iron.

Two new ball fields, cut from the Norton estate, in the rear of Divinity Hall; the Carey Gymnasium, on Holmes Field, fitted with fives-courts and a rowing tank, at a cost of $36,000; the Weld boat-house, near the Boylston Street bridge, with storage for fifty boats: such are the welcome offerings to athletics. The Carey Gymnasium is primarily intended for use by the University teams and crews; the Weld boat-house, on the contrary, for the undergraduates generally, and not for the crews.

The fund donated by Mr. J. E. Thayer, '85, for the publication of a journal of political economy, bids fair to be a pioneer in its way. Already, in 1887–88, it has been followed up by certain members of the Class of '56 with a fund of $6,000 for the publication or contributions to classical learning, by members or graduates of the University.

Another very timely gift is $200,000 from an unknown donor, "as the nucleus of a Retiring Fund for Professors." Those who are aware of the at present inadequate compensation for collegiate instruction will heartily applaud the wisdom of this generous beginning.

There has been the usual crop of new clubs and societies. New departmental clubs are the Harvard Electrical Club, the English Club, and the Graduate Club. The Andover, Southern, Minnesota, and Connecticut Clubs represent the growing tendency in college to accentuate sectional relationships. The Camera Club takes the place of the society with the long name. A useful organization has just been started, called the Union Club; it is not, as the name might lead one to infer, designed to celebrate the glories of this Republic, or to discuss national policy, but has the homelier, if not less useful, function of looking after a set of rooms for common use, by a number of co-operating clubs, which thus avoid the needless extravagance of separate quarters.

The athletic question has been very prominent during the last three years; so notorious, in fact, that any extended discussion of it would be quite superfluous. The Faculty appear, on the whole, favorable to the continuance of athletic sports as at present carried on; at least the report of a special committee, consisting of Profs J. W. White, Chaplin, and Hart, so concludes. The Faculty, President Eliot vigorously puts it, "hold that dyspepsia is less tolerable than a stiffened knee or thumb, and that effeminacy and luxury are even worse evils than brutality." On the other hand, all agree that the evils of intercollegiate contests, as hitherto carried on, are very great indeed. The intensity of the rivalry promotes extravagance, bad feeling between the colleges, and various forms of "jockeyism," or, as it is more euphemistically termed, "professionalism." The evil of extravagance has been mitigated, to some extent, by the institution, early in this year, of a graduate treasurer, appointed by the Athletic Committee. This treasurer has supervisory powers over all athletic organizations, including those of the Freshman class. His functions are to direct how all accounts shall be kept, and to book monthly reports of the same; to recommend any incompetent manager for dismissal to a finance committee; finally, in conjunction with this finance committee, to control a general fund, to which each team will contribute all of its annual surplus in excess of a certain amount specified in each case.

Bad feeling between the colleges and "jockeyism" are to some extent reciprocal in their working. Both reached a climax this last fall, — a climax which it is to be hoped means a turn for the better hereafter. The foot-ball controversy with Princeton is not a matter that either Harvard men or Princeton men can refer to with much complacency. Accusations were bandied, justificatory tests were demanded and applied, — tests of a nature and made in a spirit more befitting the prize-ring than an organization of gentlemen.

The controversy turned on mutual charges by Harvard and Princeton of playing men, who, according to the regulations passed at the New York meeting of Nov. 5, were ineligible. On Nov. 20, at a mass meeting held in Cambridge, Harvard withdrew from the league. Overtures were made to Yale, with the intent of forming a dual league. Unofficial representations from prominent Yale graduates had favored the plan; but at a mass meeting in New Haven, two days later, the matter was put into the hands of a committee. Up to the present time (May 28) there has been no decisive action. Yale has shown no indication of her attitude further than to refuse to race with Pennsylvania, as she has done for two years past.

Harvard's athletic record for the past three years is not enlivening enough to justify transcribing it from the pages of the Index. If there are any who have not followed the records in the daily papers, the present writer recommends them, on the whole, to rest in ignorance.

TRIENNIAL DINNER.

The following poem, read at the Triennial Dinner at Young's Hotel, Boston, June 23, 1890, is inserted in response to numerous requests from members of the class.

VERSES FOR THE FIRST TRIENNIAL DINNER OF 1887

I feel like one awaking from a dream
Of scenes well-known, viewed indistinct and faint,
To find before his eyes, distinct and clear,
All that his drowsy fancy tried to paint.

Often in these three years since last we met
Before my firelight's fitful, pulsing glow,
Or curled within my window seat at dusk,
I 've dreamed of days and deeds of long ago.

Then have I seen how, callow striplings all,
From East and South, from West and North we came,
Each with ambitions struggling in his breast,
Some secret longing for a college fame.

Then I have dreamed how first we battled Yale,
How Cochrane called our punt-up order forth, —
His earnest labors moulding this our class
From all the cliques of East, South, West, and North, —

Those were the days when Harvard knew to win,
When Jarvis, Holmes, Mott Haven crimson wore ; —
Ah, blessed god of the Olympic games,
Thine be the praise ; those days have come once more ! —

With thoughts like these my pulses thrilled again,
I heard from husky throats what "Yale men say ";
I saw the dense crowd sweep around the Yard,
In celebration of some glorious day

Ah, how we cheered, and how we sang and danced
About the crackling fires, while proctors fumed!
Rails, barrels, boxes flamed; a wagon burned;
Till, nothing left, our ardor was consumed.

Next day the Crimson, with its twisted types,
Preached us a rebus on our dreadful sins:
While we who saw the editors that night
Deciphered the morality with grins.

Yes, those were days! Then at the Winter Sports,
Clark, Rogers, Dudley, — but you know them all, —
Spurred on by eager faces, winsome smiles,
Made records every classmate must recall.

Then Burgess, Russell, Alexander, Keyes —
To rhyme such names my wits are on the rack —
Upon the Charles, — yes, at New London, too, —
Won honors for the orange and the black.

Thus I have dreamed of many here to-night,
Who freely gave the utmost of their powers,
That this our class might leave in Harvard's halls
A fame for years, not merely days or hours.

Yet, as I mused one night, a Freshman called,
A vestal form in white; some sash-like thing
About his dainty waist; worn, I suppose,
As relic of his mother's apron-string:

Or else, perhaps, as badge to signify
That till the little brains grow strong and wise,
The Freshman laddies cannot go alone,
But have, each youth, a Nestor to advise.

Being in twilight mood, I reminisced,
My young Antinous to entertain,
Told of the prowess that my classmates showed;
But stories, even legends, were in vain.

For thoughts and deeds we like to praise and vaunt,
He told me acts of Joneses, Browns, and Smiths.
One college generation only passed,
Yet all our deeds are fast becoming myths?

Baffled, I said, "Well, Alexander, then —"
Aha, all is not myth; my friend chimed in,
"Why, he coached '92 in Freshman year;
He's coaching us. His crews are sure to win."

No, classmates, surely you are not forgot,
Not while your deeds spur younger men to vie;
Theirs won the laurel; let us not repine, —
Contented if the crimson flag floats high.

Three years ago we gave to "Ninety" men
Our colors bright, the orange and the black;
To-day, before they pass to "Ninety-three,"
Covered with honors, "Ninety" brings them back.

Your honors are in earnest, manly hands.
Striving for college laurels, college bays;
Then, with contented hearts, come chat to-night
Of days of old, and sing our Harvard's praise.

. . . . . .

But what of Harvard in these days,
While we have gone our several ways?
What changes has she seen?
Let Hastings Hall, the Gateway tell
That Harvard's sons have loved her well.
What pride and honor mean.

On Jarvis Field another gift,
The Cary pinarets uplift
Their gilded points in air.
Here, while the wintry snow and rain
Keep oarsmen in, our crew can train
In tank beyond compare.

The scholar in the days of yore
Found little but a healthful bore
In struggling with the oar;
The boathouse by the Charles' brim
A simple boathouse was to him;
A boathouse, nothing more.

Now daily he doth take his path
Unto the Charles: a great change hath
His spirit proud come o'er.
Now, in excess of manly vim,
Trying to scull, he learns to swim, —
He and his chums, a score:

For by old Craigie Bridge there stands
A spacious boathouse that commands
His admiration great.
All this to Mr. Weld is due,
Name blessed by every future crew
And loyal graduate.

The "Soldiers' Field" — best gift of all,
Given for six who heard the call
Their country gave in need:
They gave up love, ambition, life; —
Ah, must not here our mimic strife
Be bold and strong indeed?

Would they could know, these heroes dead,
The cause has won for which they bled, —
Equality for man, —
That Sanders heard in Class-Day week
A negro for his classmates speak,
Elected by no clan.

Yea, honored, loved, our Harvard grows;
Only to worth her guerdon goes,
Whatever cynics say.
Her glories growing day by day,
Each hour adds leallets to her bay:
God keep it so for aye.

. . . . . .

Some printed pages should be here to-night,
To give us news of college chum and friend;
Their sacred proof perused, let me give hints
Of their contents, before my verses end.

Ye Benedicts, all hail! Ah, woman's wiles!
Displeased that closed to her is Harvard's gate,
Not satisfied with all the Annex offers,
With purpose ardent nothing could abate,

She has annexed some goodly men of ours.
Resistless woman's logic! For, you see,
Since matrimony maketh one of two,
A Harvard graduate she now must be.

To you I bow, O little daughters, sons!
You rule your parents; yet I find it hard
To think your budding brains shall some time be
The glories of the future Annex — Yard.

All the maids will have their mothers' beauty,
And all the sturdy lads their fathers' brain;
So Seniors all will marry Annex maidens, —
An earthly paradise be come again.

. . . . . .

But mirth, alas, was not the only note
Struck by the printed words I read to-night;
Some well-known faces, dear to many here,
Have passed forever from our yearning sight.

Theirs was the love of our fond, boyish hearts,
Theirs is the rest from all life's toil and din;
Ours is the honor their few days have won,
Mixed with the sorrow of the might-have-been.

. . . . . .

'T was not of the wisest, not of the best,
So cavillers said of this our good class.
We know they were wrong, but let the charge pass.
One virtue we have to stand every test.

Yes, we will climb the ladder of knowledge,
For years will bring wisdom, mellow our wit;
But years cannot shake our virtue a whit,
Cannot change us in love for our college.

To-night there is here no South and no North,
The Western prairie greets New England's hills;
"We 're '87," is the thought that thrills
Within each bosom, calling kinship forth.

Then, filled with memories of college days,
Close friendships made, ambitions won and lost,
The days of dreaming ere with pain and cost
Each learns his lesson in life's crowded ways,

Drink, my good comrades, drink to-night with me,
To her, the noble mother of us all:
Proud of the glories all her sons recall,
Hoping to win some glories yet to be.
